Village seeks to make ordinance clearer

Planned development law under review by officials

by LYNN ASINOF

Wheeling officials are working on ironing the wrinkles out of the village's planned development ordinance with more than a dozen such projects already either completed or under construction.

Village Mgr. George Passolt, however, said the proposed revisions are not just an afterthought to Wheeling development.

"I think that we could get many more in," Passolt said. "I'm not saying that because we have many applications. I say that because it is a concept that is being used more and more."

Passolt said the revisions being discussed at the plan commission level would insure that the village would get "the type of development that we want." He also said parts of the ordinance need to be made more specific so that developers understand village regulations.

PLAN COMMISSION members have asked village planner Thompson Dyke to prepare a rough draft of a new ordinance that would include suggestions made by various village department heads.

Some of the suggestions dealt with technical aspects of development, such as the dedication of sewer lines and the revision of sewer connection rates. Passolt said, however, the plan commission also discussed the general planned development concept.

For example, it has been suggested that the village adopt the policy of requiring a greater amount of site improvement. He noted that the ordinance is designed to give a developer flexibility in designing a residential project, and has built-in incentives for greater landscaping and other improvements.

"Because of the reduced amount of roads and utilities which a developer must provide, a higher amount of money can be put into site improvement," he said. "It seems to me that is a good wedge to use."

THE PLAN COMMISSION, however, rejected a specific incentive program proposed by Dyke, saying many aspects are already built into the village ordinance. Passolt also said the system, which is based on accumulated points, would be too difficult to enforce.

According to Dyke's proposal, the village would grant up to a 20 per cent increase in density based on the amount of landscaping, bike paths, open land, courtyards, patios, recreation facilities and other such items included in the project.

The commission made several recommendations on changing the density requirements. The zoning board, however, has jurisdiction over density, and therefore must hold public hearings before any changes are adopted.

The village currently allows up to 16 units per acre for all planned developments. Passolt said the plan commission felt this density was only appropriate for condominium or apartment projects. He said the commission recommended that the density be reduced to 9 to 10 units per acre for townhouse projects now becoming popular.

ACCORDING TO Passolt, the commission also recommended that planned developments with a mixture of housing types should not be able to calculate density on the entire acreage.

"If you are going to have a planned development with several types of housing, then your density is going to be based on the housing in that particular area," he said.

Police Chief Peter Guttilla suggested that developers be required to provide three parking spaces for each townhouse unit. He said the police department has been plagued with calls from people in these developments who own three cars.

The village currently requires only two parking spaces for each living unit.

"This has placed another burden upon our department, inasmuch as the citizens are blaming the village for this parking problem instead of the developer that designed, built and created the problem in the first place," Guttilla said.

PASSOLT SAID the plan commission has also suggested that developers be required to provide 2½ parking places for each living unit in apartment and condominium projects.

Fire Chief Bernie Koeppen asked that fire lanes become a mandatory part of the ordinance, rather than the informal policy now adopted by the village.

Several legal problems were also discussed. Village Atty. Paul Hamer noted that the present ordinance does not allow for the private ownership of individual living units.

Hamer recommended that the ordinance be revised to allow for individual ownership and also establish a minimum lot size for townhouses.

The plan commission is scheduled to continue its discussion on May 2.

Parks to sue to condemn site on Schoenbeck Road

by LYNN ASINOF

A condemnation suit is scheduled to be filed by the Wheeling Park District next week for the proposed 10-acre park site on Schoenbeck Road.

The park board directed Roger Bjorvik, park district attorney, to file the suit after owner Roy Lichter asked for more time to complete negotiations for the property. Board members said they would continue negotiating with Lichter, but said the suit was in the best interest of the park district since condemnation is a lengthy process.

The action was prompted by the fact that Lichter has raised the price of the 10-acre site more than $67,000 since the Franklin Boulevard Community Hospital began negotiating for nearby property.

IN A TWO-WEEK period, Lichter twice increased the price of the property, despite the fact that he had previously agreed to sell the 10 acres for $236,000. This figure was agreed upon after nearly two years of negotiations.

Last month Lichter notified the park district that his price had increased to $275,000. A meeting was then set up to discuss the price hike. When the meeting was finally held Feb. 27, the price had increased again to $243,000 for nine acres. An additional $60,000 was being asked for the remaining one acre and the house located there.

During the two weeks of price increase, the hospital was concluding negotiations for property just south of the proposed park site. Hospital representatives were negotiating with Lichter for his southern 10 acres as well as with other property owners in the area.

Two weeks ago, the park board notified Lichter that they would file condemnation proceedings if a price could not be agreed upon. They also noted the district could not afford to pay more than the original $236,000 figure.

IN VOTING to file the suit, park board members noted that Lichter had neither accepted nor rejected their offer.

"We did receive communication from Mr. Lichter asking for more time," said Park board Pres. Bob Ross. "The park board does not feel the filing of the condemnation suit will interfere with the talks with Mr. Lichter since the time limit to estabish condemnation proceedings is very lengthy."

By filing a condemnation suit, the park board in effect is asking a jury to decide the fair price of the Lichter property. The jury will listen to testimony from both sides and visit the property before making a decision.

If the jury sets the price too high and the park board decides not to purchase the property, the park district is responsible for the property owner's court fees.

PARK COMR. Lorraine Lark said the park district had initiated condemnation once before to obtain Northside Park, adjacent to the Nathaniel Hawthorne School. The negotiations, however, were settlted before the final court date.

The Lichter property is proposed as a community park. The purchase is to be jointly financed with funds from the December 1972 referendum and a matching state grant.

The park district is also negotiating for the 10-acre Childerley Retreat House property, 506 McHenry Rd. Both parcels are part of a general expansion program designed to accommodate future community growth.

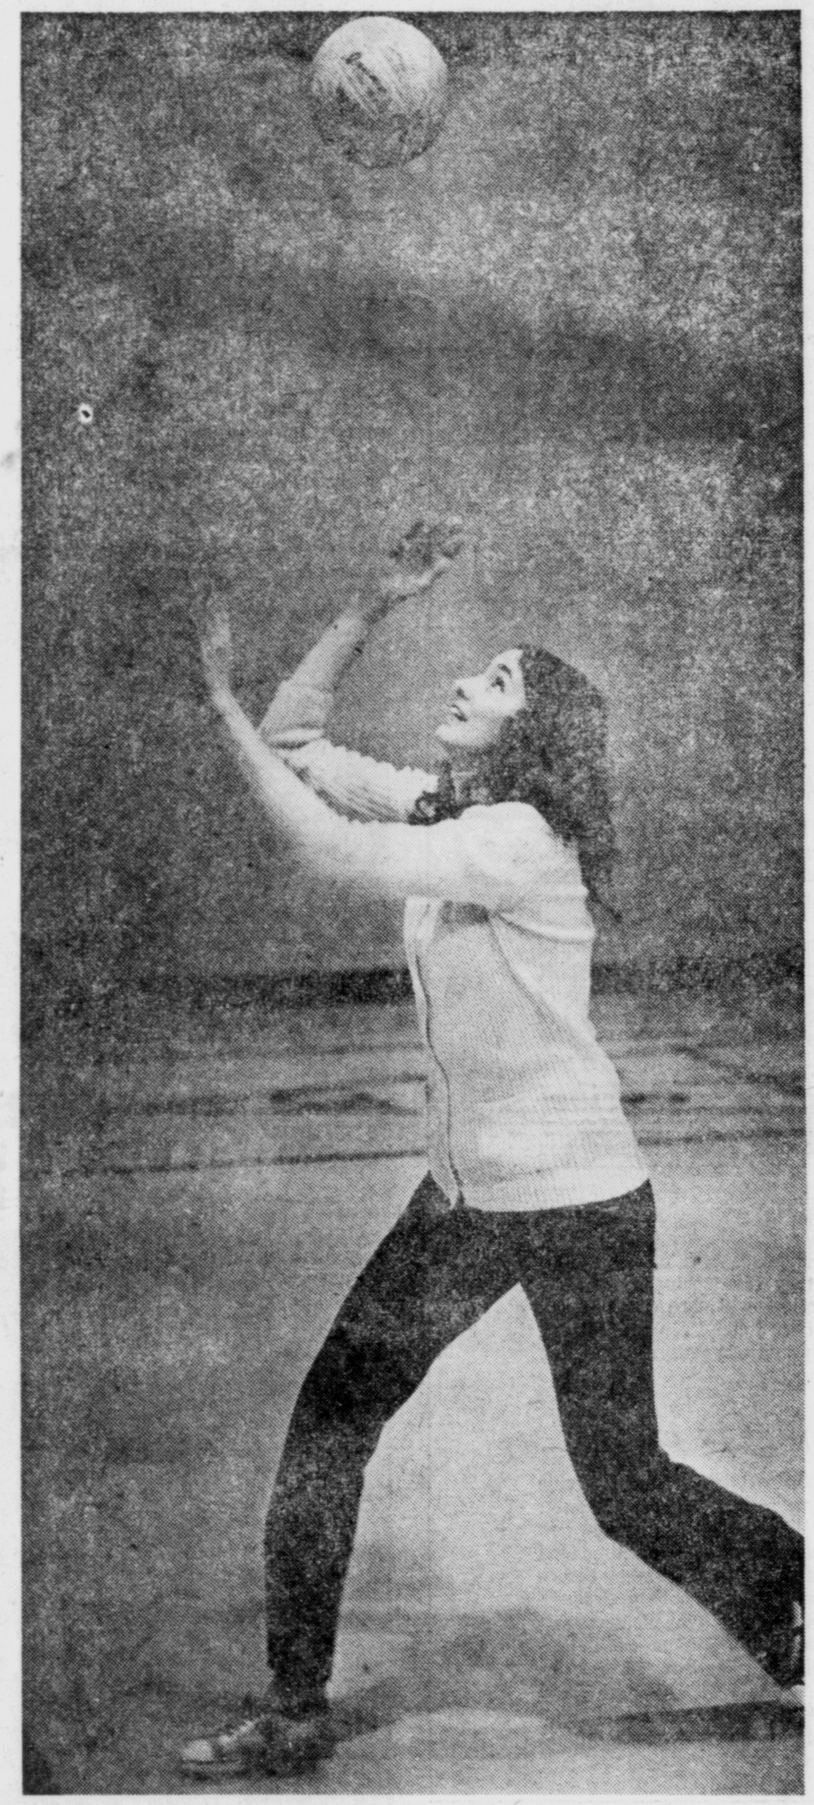

Village to review use of MFT funds

The Wheeling Village Board tonight will review a resolution to use state motor fuel tax (MFT) funds to finance proposed street improvements.

The village is planning to resurface sections of Valley Stream Drive, Cedar Drive, St. Armand Lane and Anthony Road with the Cutler repaver. The work is estimated to cost about $30,000.

The board also will review zoning recommendations for a planned development at the southeast corner of Wolf Road and Manchester Drive and an office building at 201 S. Wolf Road in southern Wheeling.

The meeting will begin at 8 p.m. in the village hall, 255 W. Dundee Rd.

"I GOT IT" is a common cry at the Wheeling Park District's Heritage Park gym on Thursday nights when women in the community "drop-by."

Cancer Crusade needs volunteers

The Wheeling Cancer Crusade, sponsored by the Wheeling Lions Club, is seeking volunteers to help raise funds on April 6, 7 and 8.

The crusade is designed to raise funds for the American Cancer Society's research, public education, professional education and patient services programs.

"A volunteer's duties are not difficult nor do they take a great amount of time, but their value is enormous," said Dan Seckelmann, crusade chairman.

Interested persons should call 398-1260 until 6 p.m.

A 'who's who' of school board hopefuls

Wheeling Dist. 21

Alberts Vigants, 760 MacArthur Dr., Buffalo Grove, last week added his name to the list of candidates who will be running in the April 13 school board election.

Vigants did not seek the endorsement of the Dist. 21 General Caucus.

The ballot for the election is now official, following the closing of filing petitions last Friday.

Incumbent Jeremiah Crise of Arlington Heights will head the ballot. Other candidates whose names will appear in order, are incumbent Jack Lane, also of Arlington Heights, Carol Karzen of Buffalo Grove and Vigants.

Mrs. Karzen is the only candidate supporters by the General Caucus.

There are two three-year terms available on the school board which serves Wheeling, Buffalo Grove and portions of Arlington Heights and Mount Prospect.

Prospect Hts. Dist. 23

Three persons will be running for two seats on the Prospect Heights Elementary Dist. 23 School Board April 13. The race became a contested battle Friday when Robert A. Horna, 1226 Center Ln., Arlington Heights, filed for the election.

Also running are incumbents Melvin Lace, 3 Garden Ct., Prospect Heights, and Vincent Battaglia, 2024 Northwood, Arlington Heights.

Lace, who currently serves as board president, will be seeking his third term on the board while Battaglia will be running for his first full term. He was appointed to the board last year to fill an unexpired vacancy.

Horna has been a resident of the district for five years. He has two children, both of whom attend Eisenhower School. Horna is a teacher at Maine South High School in Park Ridge.

All three candidates will be seeking three-year terms on the board. Filing for the election closed Friday.

Dist. 23 serves Prospect Heights, as well as parts of Wheeling, Mount Prospect and Arlington Heights.

High School Dist. 214

The High School Dist. 214 Board of Education election next month will be uncontested for the first time since 1968.

Filing for candidates closed Friday with only the two incumbents having secured places on the ballot. Jack Matthews of 1511 E. Sunset Terr., Arlington Heights, and Richard Bachhuber, of 625 S. Edward St., Mount Prospect, now appear assured of winning three-year terms on the board.

Jack Matthews

Matthews has served on the board since 1971, when he defeated Leah Cummins, an incumbent at the time. Bachhuber has served on the board since 1965.

Hersey's heroes come home to winner's welcome

by DOUG RAY

At last, residents of the Northwest suburbs know why those people in Lawrenceville, Cobden and tiny Hebron get so worked up every year.

It is called March madness in most places in Illinois, a time when a couple of lanky basketball players can put a town on the map by winning two or three tournament games in a row and going to Champaign to play the best high school teams in the state. Just being able to play in the Assembly Hall means more than anything else.

The people of Arlington Heights and surrounding suburbs welcomed the Hersey High School team home from Champaign Sunday. Sure, Hersey lost the first game Friday and was eliminated, but for a team from this area to get down there and on t e l e v i s i o n before thousands was enough to bring Hersey a hero's welcome. Because in this area, known more for its race track than high school basketball players, it was a first.

A PARADE WITH fire engines, police cars and smiling cheerleaders hanging out car windows in the 20-degree weather began at 1:30 winding through Arlington Heights to Hersey High School where 800 cheering parents, local officials and students waited.

It was the end of a basketball weekend. During Friday afternoon's Hersey game, most residents of the area were either watching the game or listening to it. During sales meetings, the score was announced at regular intervals. Persons called the Herald to find out on which radio station the game was being broadcast. Hersey was being followed by the Northwest suburbs the way the people downstate follow the finals of high school basketball every year.

TELEGRAMS AND letters wishing the local team well poured into Champaign. The superstitious had their rabbit's feet and lucky coins. And when the team finally was defeated, the talk did not end. Next year, what are the chances for next year?

Those who came out yesterday listened to speech after speech praising the local team and its backers.

Edward Gilbert, the snow-white-haired superintendent of Dist. 214, said what most had on their minds. "The whole Northwest suburbs was behind this team . . . when you make it to the top eight out of 300 schools you've really done something.

"Now that Hersey's done it, it will be easier for other schools in the area. We will be looking for other teams now to represent us . . . spirit like this helps us have great communities."

Hoop tourneys to end park district play

A series of tournaments Saturday at Wheeling High School will wind up the Wheeling Park District's basketball program this year.

A senior league champion for youngsters in the seventh and eighth grades will be named after various teams compete in single elimination contests.

The junior, midget and peewee leagues for younger children will play their final games in a match between the champions from the east and west side of the village.

The games will run from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. in the high school gym. More than 200 youngsters have participated in the basketball leagues this year.

School principals, chief to clash?

School principals and Elk Grove Dist. 59 Supt. James Erviti may be headed for a showdown over "unprofessional treatment" and "constant demeaning" by Erviti. The principals, reportedly upset with Erviti's leadership for some time, cited five major grievances in a letter sent to the superintendent more than a month ago. Among them: a need for written explanation by Erviti when an administrator's work is deemed unsatisfactory; a "phony and unnecessarily expensive" budget development practice; "frequently rude, inconsiderate and offensive" treatment of principals; ineffective decision-making, and the "single-text approach to curriculum." School Board Pres. Allen Sparks said he is aware of the situation but regards it as an "administrative problem." In the future, he indicated, "there may be a point where the board should get involved."

Negotiations on Oakton site soon

Negotiations are expected to begin today between Oakton Community College and the Chicago Catholic Archdiocese for purchase of a permanent Oakton campus. The Illinois Community College Board Friday approved Oakton's campus choice, a 170-acre property owned by the Archdiocese south of Central Road in Maine Township. Oakton Pres. Paul Gilson said the college has enough money to buy the site without a tax increase referendum, but may need one later for construction funds. "I think if it appeared a referendum would take too much time and we would be in danger of losing the site, the board would go ahead and buy it," he said.

Race track theft suspect arrested

A pari-mutuel clerk wanted in the theft of $6,000 last July from Arlington Park race track has been arrested in Jefferson County, Wis. The clerk, Michael Faulkner, 27, has waived extradition and will return to Illinois to face theft charges after a fraud charge against him in Wisconsin is resolved, Arlington Heights police said yesterday. The money was discovered missing following a July 2 appearance by Secretariat, which forced the hiring of 150 temporary pari-mutuel clerks, including Faulkner.

Arlington to weigh bus subsidy

The Arlington Heights Village Board tonight will consider a $2,000 monthly subsidy request from Metron Systems Corp. to continue Metron's three bus lines between the local Chicago and North Western Ry. station and selected residential areas. The firm says while ridership has increased, heavy start-up costs and the delay of a $15,000 state grant make the subsidy necessary. Metron and the Village of Mount Prospect are working on an agreement to provide similar service in Mount Prospect. It will be discussed at an April 3 meeting of the village board's fire and police committee.

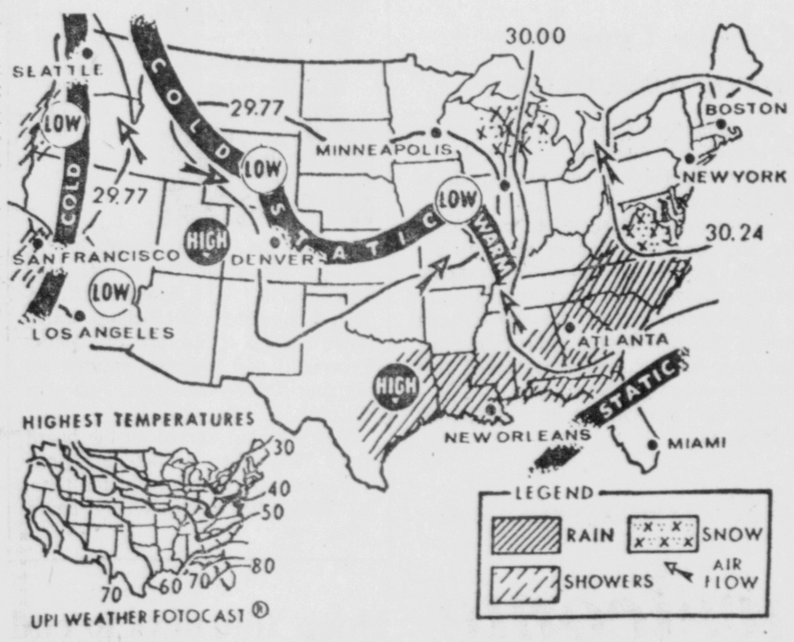

Ex-Hoffman mayor tells of bribe

Hoffman Estates officials took more than three months in 1968 to settle on a $70,000 price to sell out their community, according to former Mayor Roy L. Jenkins. Testifying Friday in the federal zoning bribery trial of attorney Bernard Peskin, Jenkins said he and five other officials who have already pleaded guilty in the zoning scandal decided on the $70,000 figure less than a week before they gave zoning approval to Kaufman and Broad, Inc.'s Barrington Square development. Peskin, on trial before U. S. District Judge Frank J. McGarr, is accused of bribery, conspiracy and tax evasion in passing payoffs from K&B to the officials.

Weigh charging pilot in crash

The Cook County State's Attorney's Office will decide whether the surviving pilot in a two-plane collision last Sept. 13 at Pal-Waukee Airport near Wheeling will be charged in the death of the other pilot. Such action was recommended last week by a Cook County coroner's jury. Testimony before the coroner's jury indicated that William Jacobson of Madison, Wis., was "careless in operating" his light plane, resulting in the death of Gary B. Kayser, 17, of Northbrook. Kayser was practicing take-offs and landings when the mid-air collision occurred. Jacobson, at the time told The Herald, "I didn't see what happened. I was coming in and he hit me." Jacobson and three passengers in his plane were not injured in the accident.

Harper candidate total reaches 10

Four additional candidates brought the field in the Harper College board race to 10 Friday, as filing for the April 13 election closed.

Six of the candidates will run against each other for three three-year terms and four will seek a single-two year term on the board.

Filing Friday for the three-year term was Robert G. Rausch, 400 Firestone Dr., Hoffman Estates. He will run against incumbents William Kelly of Arlington Heights, and Ross Miller of Mount Prospect, and Stanley E. Carrier, Robert Bromley, both of Hoffman Estates and Judith Troehler of Mount Prospect.

Also filing Friday for the two-year term were Shirley A. Munson, of 639 N. Benton, Palatine; Ralph E. Walbert, of 320 N. Main, Mount Prospect and Donald J. Payton, of 311 N. Carter, Palatine. They will run against incumbent Ray Blakeman of Hoffman Estates.

RAUSCH, A RESIDENT of Hoffman Estates for four years, is director of standards and controls for the Zurich-American Insurance Co. He said he has become interested in the college through a younger brother who is a student there and is also interested in announced plans that the college is looking for a second campus, a move he said "I have doubts about."

Rausch said, "I'm professionally qualified to deal with budgets, management and planning and I think I have something to offer."

Mrs. Munson is a former member of the Palatine village board of trustees and Palatine zoning board of appeals. She served on the village board from January, 1972, to April, 1973. She has been a resident of Palatine since 1960 and is a teachers' aid in Palatine-Rolling Meadows Dist. 15.

MRS. MUNSON said she decided to run for the Harper board because "In looking over the various governmental units I realized Harper was one of our biggest taxing bodies." She added, "I would like to be a watchdog for this particular taxing body."

Walberg, a resident of Mount Prospect for 16 years, is executive director of Countryside Center for the Retarded in Barrington. He served on the Mount Prospect Dist. 57 board from 1967 to 1970.

Walberg said he has served on advisory committees for Harper and decided to run because "my children are getting to the age where Harper may be for them and, of course Harper is for all of us. It has ceased to be a junior college and has become a community college."

Herald wins 3rd straight Scher award

Steve Brown

Herald staff writer Steve Brown was named the recipient of the prestigious Jacob Scher Award for Investigative Reporting for 1974.

Brown was given the award in recognition of his series of stories dealing with apparant fraud perpetrated on new inventors. The series began when Brown posed as a job applicant as an "inventor evaluator" for the Imperial Inventors Co., of Des Plaines, a self-professed inventor help firm.

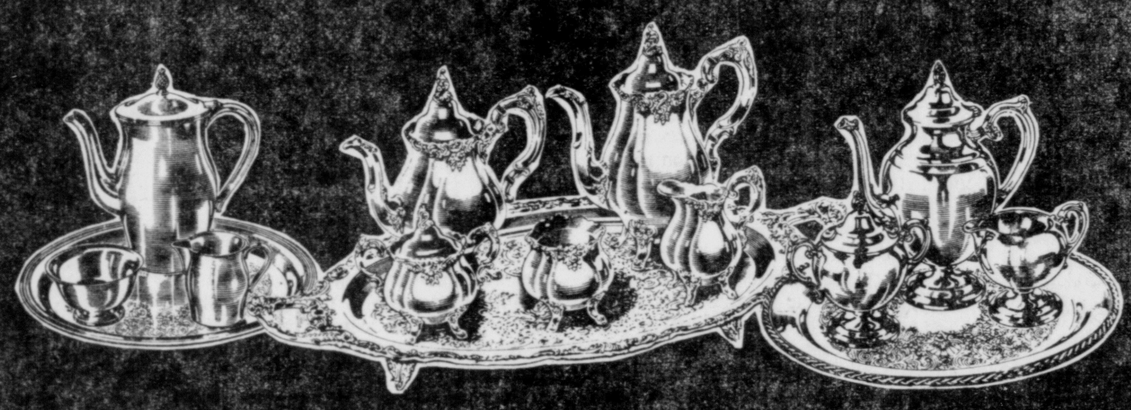

Brown, in cooperation with former Herald staff writer Dave Mahsman, learned that evaluators were taught a sales pitch for prospective inventors and nothing more, and there was evidence that inventors who came to Imperial were not receiving valid evaluations of thier ideas at all. Mahsman is now with the Decatur, Ill., Herald & Review.

AS A RESULT of the series, agents of the Illinois Attorney General's office and the U.S. Attorney's office launched investagations.

The U.S. Attorney won indictments against five Imperial officials and the Illinois Attorney General brought suit against Imperial on charges of fraud and deceptive practice.

Brown's award is the third in consecutive years won by Herald staff writers for investigative reporting. Previous winners of the Jacob Scher Award were Herald Staffers Leon Shure and Bob Casey for investigations of Office of Economic Opportunity, summer programs in 1972, and Joann Van Wye in 1973 for the probe into spending practices in the Rolling Meadows Park District.

Other nominees for the Scher award this year were the Waukegan News-Sun and the Trib, a supplement to the Chicago Tribune.

Abortive coup is led against Amin

NAIROBI (UPI) — A former army chief of staff who recently returned from Russia led an abortive coup attempt against Ugandan President Idi Amin Sunday that ended in a six-hour tank and machinegun battle in the streets of Kampala, diplomatic sources said.

Radio Uganda said a rumor that an invading force meant to kill Amin sparked the fighting between confused army troops in the capital of the central African country.

The diplomats identified the leader of what they described as a mutiny against Amin as Brig. Charles Arube who has been army chief of staff until he went to the Soviet Union for further military training about a year ago. He returned to Uganda only recently.

A military spokesman Sunday night said Arube shot himself twice during the fighting and that he died later in a hospital.

Diplomatic sources said Amin's own words indicated he probably was the target of an unsuccessful coup.

They said statements in which Amin told soldiers to "kill him if they were dissatisfied with his leadership" supported their view that the six-hour clash was an abortive rebellion. Radio Uganda said an unknown number of "soldiers and other people were killed during the confusion."

The radio said Amin met soldiers who briefly occupied the city in Sunday's predawn hours and then drove through Kampala where he was cheered by thousands of persons.

"The troops told him they had been misinformed last night that an invading force meant to kill him and take over the country," it said. "These troops then moved to forestall such an event and occupied installations on Kampala. They are now back in their barracks."

Diplomatic sources noted, however, that the radio did not adequately explain why troops fought among themselves sporadically between 1 a.m. and 7 a.m. if in fact there were no invaders to fight.

Amin, a former sergeant major who trained for and won his paratroop wings in Israel, came to power three years ago in a bloodless coup.

Diplomats said there has been widespread unrest for several weeks in the army, which is Amin's base of power.

Amin, who in three years instituted several purges to rid himself of "enemies," earlier this month tried to tighten his grip on the armed forces. He relinquished control over all other areas of government and announced he would concentrate on reorganizing the army.

Paves way for Nixon visit

Kissinger, Soviets meet

MOSCOW (UPI) — Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger arrived Sunday night to prepare the way for President Nixon's projected visit and said he hoped to make concrete progress on nuclear arms, trade and other issues in talks with Soviet leaders.

Kissinger flew into Vnukovo airport from Bonn, where he met West German Chancellor Willy Brandt during the afternoon and discussed recent U. S. differences with its European allies.

"I expect we will make concrete progress on a number of outstanding issues, and that we will agree that all of us have an obligation to promote them in every part of the world," Kissinger told newsmen in Moscow as he walked from his plane to a waiting black Soviet limousine.

Kissinger was expected to hold three days talks with Leonid I. Brezhnev, Communist Party general secretary, and Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko.

He said topics would include the stalemate in Soviet-American nuclear arms talks at Geneva, U.S.-Soviet trade, Middle East diplomacy and Nixon's expected visit here in June.

SECRETARY OF State Henry Kissinger arrived in Moscow yesterday to prepare the way for President Nixon's projected visit. He also said he hoped to make progress on nuclear arms, trade and other issues with Soviet leaders. He was met at the airport by Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko, on his arrival from talks with Willy Brandt in West Germany.

Arabs to demand Israel evacuation

From Herald news services

Arab League foreign ministers in Tunis will issue a new call for Israel's evacuation of all occupied Arab lands including Jerusalem at a meeting beginning today, diplomatic sources said.

All 21 League members will be represented at the conference which will study such agenda issues as prospects for Israeli-Syrian talks on troop disengagement on the Golan Heights, to preparations for a new Arab summit, sources said.

Arab diplomatic sources said the ministers also will try to overcome differences arising from the recent lifting of the oil embargo against the United States, a move opposed by Libya and Syria. Another of the objectives will be to determine a joint strategy on the oil issue for the U.N. General Assembly on energy and development opening April 9. The meeting will open at Bardo Palace tonight.

In Cairo meanwhile, diplomatic sources said they expected new talks between Egypt and Israel on a further partial Israel withdrawal from the occupied Sinai to begin in early summer.

They said also that in spite of continued gunbattles on the Golan Heights Egyptian officials are confident an Israeli-Syrian troop separation accord can be reached by early May at the latest.

On the battlefields, both Syria and Israel reported fighting across the ceasefire lines for the 13th consecutive day.

A Damascus communique said there had been a 30-minute artillery duel in which Syrian artillery scored direct hits on an Israeli observation post at Tel al Faras, destroyed an engineering unit and killed or wounded a number of Israeli soldiers. It said the firing began when "the enemy tried to fortify its positions in the southern sector of the front."

No mention was made of Syrian casualties.

A Tel Aviv spokesman said the Syrians fired "several shells" which caused no casualties and that the fire was not returned.

In Jerusalem, an estimated 6,000 demonstrators massed Sunday outside Prime Minister Golda Meir's office to protest alleged failure of Israeli leaders during the October War. It was one of the biggest demonstrations in Israeli history.

Reserve Capt. Motti Ashkenazi, 33, who has been leading public protests calling for the resignation of Defense Minister Moshe Dayan, told the crowd that various protest groups plan to merge into one mass movement. These include his own and those involving members of the armored corps and paratrooper units.

'Normal summer' for gas

From United Press International

Many Americans who had been staying home on weekends because of the gasoline shortage hit the road to seaside resorts, parks and historic attractions Sunday, five days after President Nixon dropped the voluntary ban on Sunday gasoline sales.

President Nixon suggested last week that the lifting of the Arab oil embargo and increased supplies of gasoline no longer made it necessary for stations to shut down on Sunday.

William E. Simon, the nation's energy chief, had some good news and a word of caution for motorists Sunday. He predicted that gasoline supplies should increase sufficiently for a "normal summer" of travel but drivers should plan their trips, observe 55 miles per hour speed limits and shut off their car air conditioners.

William Simon

"Using our heads, we are going to be able to have a normal summer," Simon said in a television interview.

In the Middle Atlantic states, where the gasoline shortage almost created an emergency in February, a UPI survey showed that despite Nixon's lifting of the ban few service stations opened Sunday.

Despite the few number of stations open Sunday, there were increases at tourist attractions and indications that the weekend trip was returning.

Strong bookings were reported by Washington area hotels and motels for next weekend's annual Cherry Blossom Festival.

There were dramatic increases in tourists in Ocean City, Md., Williamsburg, Va., and some state parks in Maryland, Virginia and North Carolina.

Bad weather kept people at home in many areas, including Orlando, Fla., site of Disney World. Traffic on the Florida Turnpike was reported heavier, however.

Officials of the American Automobile Association said many stations lacked personnel to operate, some didn't have enough gasoline and many operators liked taking the day off.

Sixteen per cent of the service stations in the Los Angeles area were open, compared to only a fraction on recent Sundays, but traffic was still described as light.

In the southern New York area, about one third of 160 stations surveyed by the AAA were open.

Controversial bills on tap

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Congress tackles three of the session's most controversial bills this week — campaign financing, federal school aid and no-fault auto insurance — with the outcome of all three in doubt.

The Senate will take up the campaign bill Tuesday and then probably alternate between that and no-fault legislation during the latter part of the week. The House opens debate Tuesday on the school bill.

The campaign financing bill, an outgrowth of the Watergate scandals, involves a new test between President Nixon and the Democratic-steered Congress and may face another filibuster.

Nixon wants the House to approve the school bill, which includes antibusing provisions and increases local control over schools. But he has said he would veto a rival Senate version if it reached his desk.

Congress itself is torn over the no-fault legislation which squeaked through the Senate Judiciary Committee last week by an 8-7 vote. In approving the bill, the committee majority said it would mean "assured and immediate compensation by the motorist's own insurance company of all economic losses of all victims of auto accidents while reducing premium costs."

Issue bikeway guidelines

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The government announced Sunday guidelines to permit states to use federal money to construct bikeways and walkways outside the rights-of-way of federal aid highways.

The Transportation Department said the new program permits use of any federal highway money, except interstate highway funds, to be used to construct cyclist and pedestrian facilities on the basis of 70 per cent federal money and 30 per cent state funds.

Auto workers' furloughs may be last: observers

DETROIT (UPI) — More than 45,000 U.S. auto workers are on one-week furloughs this week in what some industry observers say may be the last massive layoffs if new car sales pick up during the spring.

General Motors Corp., hardest hit by the slump in big car sales, idled nearly 30,000 workers at six assembly plants and two Fisher Body plants. In addition, another 3,000 GM workers will be laid off indefinitely as afternoon shifts at three plants are eliminated.

Chrysler Corp. kept one Detroit plant closed, idling 4,800 workers, and Ford either closed or curtailed operations at four assembly plants, idling temporarily almost 8,000 workers while laying off another 1,050 indefinitely.

With more than 100,000 auto industry workers idled because of the slump that began even before the Arab oil embargo was imposed, industry executives will be even more interested in mid-March sales figures due out today.

While it's not expected the mid-March sales will top year-ago figures, industry analysts expect to see sales inch closer to the March 11-20 figures of 1973. What they really want to see is an upturn in the actual number of cars sold over previous 10-day periods this month.

Baker: give a little on tape issue

Sen. Howard Baker, R-Tenn., saying the nation does not want President Nixon's impeachment decided on a "narrow legalism," yesterday urged both Nixon and the House Judiciary committee to "give a little" on the committee's demands for 42 presidential tapes. In other areas, the New York Times reported Sunday Congressional investigators looking into President Nixon's taxes are reportedly convinced the deed establishing his right to claim a $576,000 deduction for his vice presidential papers never existed.

Cancer pinpoint plan is urged

The president of the American Cancer Society yesterday called for a formal program to pinpoint high-risk cancer groups and said this could save nearly 100,000 lives in the nation annually. Dr. Justin Stein proposed an identification system be developed through the cooperative efforts of the American Cancer Society, National Cancer Institute, federal and state agencies, medical groups and perhaps international organizations.

Secret donation linked to Democrats

The Washington Post reported yesterday computerized mailing lists used in the 1972 campaign by several Midwestern Democrats were paid for by a secret donation from the nation's largest dairy cooperative, the Associated Milk Producers Inc. The story was based on a lawyers' report to the cooperative's board of directors.

Bar fire suspect held on bond

Ernest Burton Jr. was being held yesterday under $375,000 bond on 32 charges, including murder, attempted murder and arson in the deaths of eight persons in a fire in the Caboose Bar in Allentown, Pa. Twelve other persons were injured, seven critically, when a five gallon can of gasoline was hurled into the front door of the ghetto bar.

San Francisco teachers eye walkout

Charging the school district with "throwing down the gauntlet," San Francisco's teachers prepared to walk out this morning when the city's public schools open. After a day of optimism Saturday in which it appeared both sides had found a basis for settlement, the outlook turned dismal when no further talks were slated until today.

Only 5 per cent of moon rocks studied

A geochemist in Houston said Sunday that only about 5 per cent of the 840 pounds of lunar rock brought to earth from the moon has been analyzed since the first load was returned five years ago. He bugs people

It may be illegal, but it's also very profitable

Get the feeling of being watched lately? Do you hear a distant hum on your telephone? Don't worry, it may not be outright paranoia, it may only mean that you, like thousands of others are being snooped on.

Bugging does happen, more often than the average person knows, and Herald writer Barry Sigale went to the source for these stories on professional eavesdroppers. A hook hanger, the guy who plants the bugs, a counterspy and others talked to our writer about their various trades.

by BARRY SIGALE

Mr. X is a hook hanger.

He has bugged politicians, crime syndicate figures, businessmen, men, women and children.

He has become financially well-to-do as a super-sleuth par-excellence while toying with individual freedoms, damning the tenets put down in the Bill of Rights.

His work has been that of an illegal eavesdropper. He has planted listening devices on people, and around them. They are virtually wired-for-sound when he is through with them. Most of his victims broadcast clearly a couple of miles away.

If he, or someone else, isn't listening to you now, or haven't in the past, just wait. They'll probably get around to you yet.

Just enter a political campaign.

Apply for a promotion within the company or office you work. Participate in a lecture boycott rally. Have an affair. bet on a parlay card.

WHEN STOPPING to ponder the scope of illegal wiretapping and bugging in business and industry and in the political arena in this country it is easy to conjure up in the mind the site of hundreds of bug men squirming around dingy basements, scaling large telephone poles and hiding behind closed doors.

Well, America, that's exactly the way it is, and it's happening this very minute.

While the Watergate revelations continue to intrigue and irritate an imbittered but largely indifferent public, a more sinister and devious activity involving the illegal wiretapping and bugging of millions of Americans is going ahead full steam.

Threatening the basic freedoms of a democratic people — essentially, the right to privacy and to lead a life without interference or restriction — this infringement on citizens has come to alter a familiar question:

No longer does the query, "Who IS being bugged?" apply when the subject of snooping arises. Rather, the question now is, "Who ISN'T being bugged?" That's how prevalent this form of espionage has become.

MR. X SAYS being a bug man, wire man or hook hanger, whatever you want to call them, means participating in a highly lucrative business. That's why it is so difficult to believe him when he says he has retired from hanging hooks. The job has gotten into his blood, he says. It's difficult to quit. It's a good profession to be in if you don't get caught. And, he says, you don't get caught. Or convicted. Make your own judgment.

"There isn't a chance in ten million that a hook hanger would get caught," says Mr. X. "A wiretapper says, 'Until they catch me up a pole I've never wiretapped.' And nobody," he laughs, "catches a wiretapper up a pole. People say I'm an old-time wire man. But people never saw me on a hook."

Because he has never been "caught up a pole," Mr. X, 49, a former Chicago Police Department detective (as are most wiretappers) and now a private security agent, doesn't have much to worry about. But he retains his anonymity for this story because of his past exploits. Not that they'll put him in jail. He just doesn't want to lose any clients. And because man has a vindictive nature.

Mr. X has a clear vantage point of the operations of the hordes of bug men who are making it possible for interested persons (bug men don't care what is being recorded) to find out what's being said behind closed office doors, over private telephone lines and even in the supposed privacy of the home.

He says practically no one is safe from this snooping, that there is "no such thing as a private telephone conversation." Bug men, he says, jokingly refer to the telephone company as the "National Broadcasting Company (there's no relation to the television conglomerate)."

"AS WE ARE SITTING here now, this minute, hundreds of people in town are being recorded," he says, glancing out his Chicago office window. "There are 10,000 wiretaps put on or taken off every day in the Chicago Metropolitan area (most of them in the city)."

Because of their experience in such matters, former and even present policemen, one-time telephone company employes and ex-GIs are now bug men in private life. There is a greater demand than ever for their services, according to Mr. X, and they're making big money because of it.

"When Illinois passed its eavesdropping law," Mr. X says, "it increased the demand for wiretapping. And it increased the prices. Then the federal government made it a felony (instead of a misdemeanor) and wiretappers started to make money."

Mr. X says there is "astronomical money" to be made from wiretapping and bugging. "Now it costs a minimum of $500 to hang the hook and $100 a day for every day it's up. Sometimes it costs $300 to get it down. Why, you can even get one wiretap job that can support you for a whole year."

SINCE BUG MEN get their money in cash, in front, they don't care if the bugs are found. They've been paid in advance. They take the money and run. It takes a lot of guts to be a bug man, Mr. X says, though, he adds, it's not that hard to "con yourself" into a targeted place, and the money is well-earned, whether someone finds the bug or not.

Mr. X says bug men are hired to gather information from individuals for certain reasons.

Reporters may be wired to determine who their sources are on damaging stories or to find out what information they are gathering, he says.

Ex-Chicago policemen are routinely bugged, he says, when they leave the force because of possible damaging information they might use against their fellow officers.

Politicians are monitored extensively during a political campaign to find out secrets that can be used against them in a campain. Sometimes they are slanderous and of highly personal activities. If the information is not made public, the opponent is at least made aware the other side has found out about it. There is the obvious fear that they might use it.

Mr. X believes the average citizen also should be concerned with the amount of illegal wiretapping and bugging going on because it is possible he will one day be a victim of an eavesdropper.

"THE AVERAGE guy should be afraid," he says. "Say he's up for a promotion. It's worth $1,000 to a corporation to find out all about him at both the office and his home. They want to find out his reliability, what his social life is like. They want to know everything they can about him and his family.

"Take the sales representative of a company who has responsibilities in several states. Even though he's making a good salary his company wants to make sure he's not feeding valuable information to their competitors."

A most interesting example of the use of bug men is of one spouse cheating on the other. According to Mr. X, the spouse takes great pains to cover his or her tracks, meeting secretly, giving excuses and alibis as the affair continues.

"Then," Mr. X says, "the husband picks up the telephone at home and calls his mistress. If he's wiretapped the bug man can get the mistress' name, phone number and address.

"Now we know what motel the two of them are going to. We can go to the motel and wait for them. Or take the wife and attorney along. You knock on the door and you've got your divorce case."

WHERE BUGGING isn't going on, the fear and anxiety — paranoia, if you will, about being bugged — has had almost the same effect as if the actual bugging was taking place, according to Edwin J. Bray, counter industrial espionage agent and revered foe of hook hangers.

"Bugging is going full blast and going to get worse," says Bray, whose Chicago security agency specializes in finding and eliminating illegal bugs and wiretaps. "The need (for his kind of services) has shot up 300 per cent in the last ten years."

It has become increasingly necessary, according to Bray, for business and industrial executives, politicians, attorneys, bankers, doctors, salesmen and others sparring in the highly competitive economic world to take extreme precautions while going about their business. Why? Because they're all spying on one another.

Some won't talk on the telephone, opting to do business face-to-face with a client or prospective customer. Others insist on having their telephones and offices checked, or "swept," before conducting any work-related conversations.

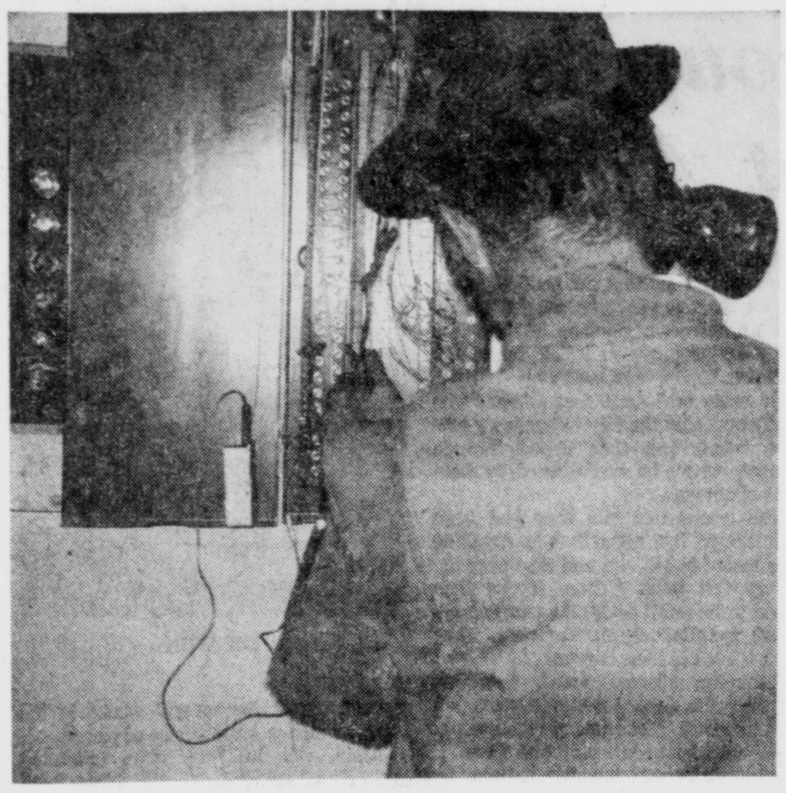

Bugged? Illinois Bell can find out

Telephone customers who suspect their phones might be tapped can find out by calling repair service at 611, Illinois Bell Telephone Co. officials urge.

According to these officials, that's the only sure way customers can determine if they are being wiretapped. They said, however, that most of the symptoms which customers observe noise on the line, other voices, etc. — are usually nothing more than repair problems.

But, to be sure, customers may request a check for wiretaps. A telephone repairman will make a physical inspection of the telephone instrument, as well as other connection points where a tap might be located.

If anything suspicious turns up, security department investigators are alerted. The customer is told and the tap removed, unless, of course, it is a legal wiretap authorized by a federal court.

A BUG MAN at his trade. Politicians, gangsters, businessmen, men, women and children are victims of illegal wiretapping, according to experts.

Today's equipment allows the wiretapper to bug — and forget

Bugging and wiretapping are means of getting information usually difficult or impossible to obtain by more conventional methods.

A bug is an electronic device used to transmit conversations held by telephone or in a room which can be heard and recorded by someone listening in another room in the same building or elsewhere.

Telephone wiretaps involve the interception of telephone messages, usually by a physical connection to the wires. A wiretapper can connect his listening device by simply finding an access point where the victim's telephone wires appear.

A BUG CAN BE small enough to fit in a fountain pen, wrist watch, martini olive or bouquet of flowers. The conversation can be monitored continuously or recorded for later use.

The art of wiretapping and bugging has changed and along with the great strides in the electronics field bug men have improved their craft.

Wire men used to spend most of their time in a basement monitoring telephone calls while forcing down cold hot dogs and drinking cold coffee. That's not true anymore, according to the pros in the business. Modernization, which eventually comes to everything, has come to hanging hooks.

Indeed, today's monitoring equipment used by bug men allows them to install it and forget it. They can go on to another job, assured that the tape recorder they have left behind is working properly and gathering the information the bug man was hired to get.

BUG MEN USE various devices to get to this information. They can hook up wires to the telephone box in a certain building where their target is working. A transmitter is attached and all conversations are broadcast to an FM radio receiver, which activates a tape recorder as far as four miles away.

Or they can climb a telephone pole and hook onto the lines to transmit as in the above example. If the bug man has access to the office being bugged he can simply install a three-way plug into a wall socket. Two sides of the plug work, the other contains a bug. Thus, all conversations in the office are transmitted and taped.

Or, a microphone, as small as a ring, can be hidden in the telephone itself. Or the switchboard can be wired. Another ploy by bug men is to send their victims a present, like a desk ornament, with the monitoring devices placed within.

A FAVORITE ACTIVITY of bug men is to strap an ordinary-looking watch around the wrist with wires running from it. The wires are run from the arm to the shoulder and down the back where it is attached to a recorder in the back pocket. With the sleeves rolled down, it looks like nothing devious is taking place.

Also interesting is the "spy-vs-spy" kind of activity going on between the bug men and the de-bug men.

One side, the de-bug men, is working on a jammer deivce which would make it impossible for a telephone conversation to be tapped. Thus, bug men would be useless.

Of course, bug men will try to come up with a de-jammer, which will prompt the de-bug man to come up with a de-de-jammer. And so it goes.

As one de-but man put it, "You either keep going in this business or go down the tube."

But Illinois law tough on illegal bugging

Legal wiretaps are on the increase

"The people shall have the right to be secure in their persons, houses, papers and other possessions against unreasonable searches, seizures, invasions of privacy or interceptions of communications by eavesdropping devices or other means."

—Illinois Constitution.

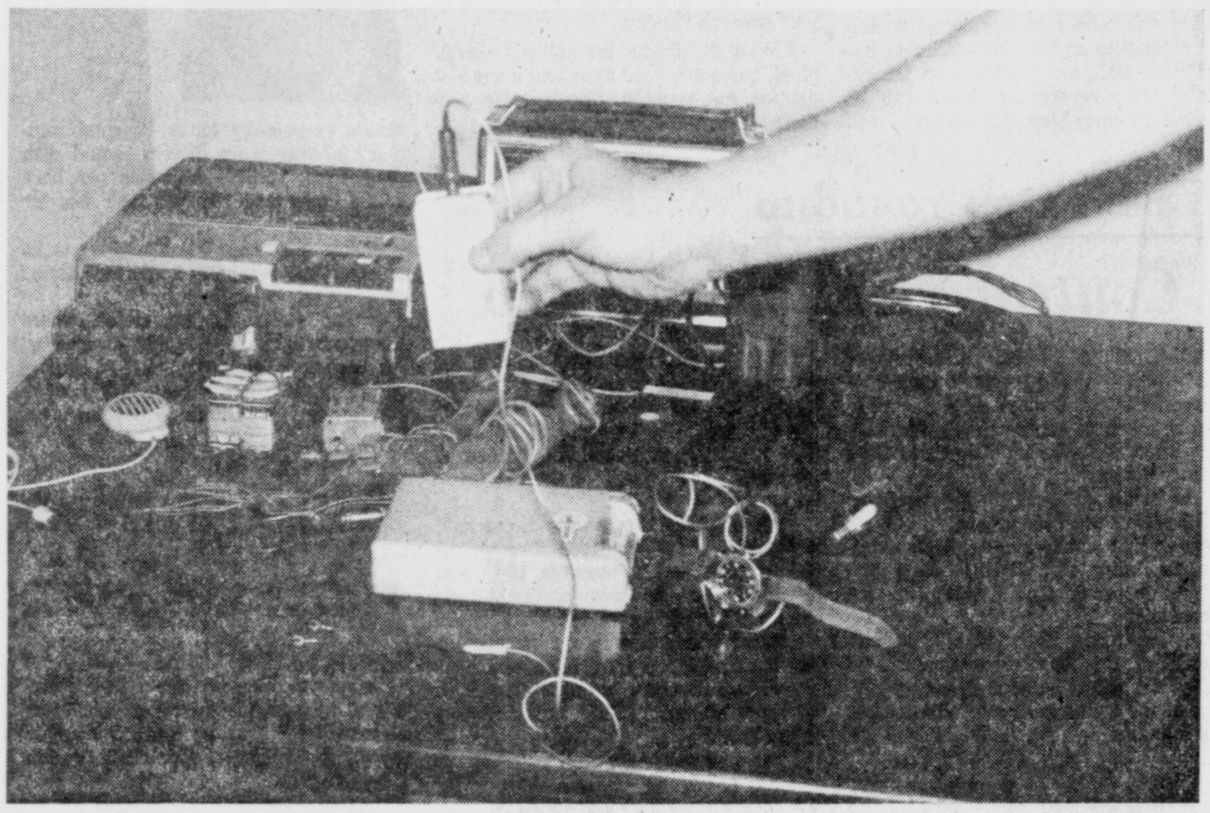

The intent is right out front. Do your own thing. Lead your own life. And rest assured that your freedoms and liberties are being protected.

Illinois law is one of the toughest in the nation when it comes to dealing with illegal wiretapping and bugging operations. Basically, it is illegal to partake in such activities by any state law enforcement agency.

The only exception is that wiretapping may be used in certain criminal investigations where there is probable cause and when a court authorizes such surveillance. In such cases, at least one party must consent to any eavesdropping plan.

The state statute differs from federal law in regards to wiretapping. The Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968 sets forth procedures for obtaining these wiretap warrants. It says federal wiretapping does not require the consent of either party, although probable cause still must be shown and a court authorization obtained.

Government wiretapping has been a major controversy as early as the 1920s when the U.S. Supreme Court first took up the matter. At that time, Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes called wiretapping "a dirty business."

TOOLS REPRESENT a major expense for the wiretapper in order to do his job. Just the few pieces of equipment pictured here cost $1,800. And because of competition between bug men and de-bug men — those hired to remove listening devices — the cost of equipment is expected to rise considerably.

WIRETAPPING of any kind then was illegal, though the law was largely ignored and the practice continued. The use of any information obtained in this manner was not admissible in court.

It was during this period that wire tapping became a popular information-gathering device not only by state and federal agencies but also by the business community, industry and the private sector.

In 1967 the Supreme Court ruled that the Fourth Amendment to the Constitution (dealing with individual rights and privacy) applies to telephone conversations and that a court warrant is necessary to wiretap. This ruling led directly to the passage of the 1968 act.

Most wiretapping is done by agents from the FBI, Internal Revenue Service, Treasury Department and other agencies of the Justice Department. In contrast, very little wiretapping is reported being done by Illinois law enforcement officials.

Court-authorized federal wiretaps totaled only 33 in 1969 but the numbers have been rising ever since. In 1970, according to the Administrative Office of the U.S. Courts, there were 183 court-approved federal wiretaps. In 1971 there were 285, in 1972, 206. Court-authorized state wiretaps grew from 269 in 1969 to 649 in 1972.

ACCORDING TO statistics provided by Illinois Bell Telephone, there were almost as many discoveries of illegal forms of wiretapping in 1972 than the federally-initiated wiretaps.

The telephone company, in a precarious position because it must try to protect the secrecy of communications on the one hand while at the same time cooperate with federal agencies as required by law, said that nationwide, the Bell System discovered 249 wiretapping devices planted illegally in the U.S. in 1971 and 174 in 1972.

Illinois Bell reported discovering and removing about 20 illegal wiretaps on its phones in Illinois and some parts of Indiana in 1972 and about the same number last year.

While law enforcement agencies are required to report the number of wiretaps it places each year, there are those who contend they are misleading the public by not revealing all such actiyities. Critics contend these agencies, too, are abusing their powers.

EVERY DAY, said one especially harsh critic, agents are abusing the rights of individuals by illegally wiretapping and bugging in their efforts to track down criminals.

"More persons have gone to jail because of (information gathered from) illegal wiretapping," he said, "than you've got fingers, toes and teeth." And, he added, "if they have gathered information on an innocent person they don't throw it away or destroy it. They put it in a Big Brother file."

The most talked about abuse of the wiretapping laws occurred in the Watergate case and related matters. Though some of the activities which have come to place a bad mark on politicians were, it has been explained, done for national security reasons, it is evident that much of the wiretapping was illegal.

THERE ARE TWO divergent viewpoints concerning wiretapping. The liberal attitude is that wiretapping and bugging of any kind whatsoever is a threat to society. The more conservative outlook is that with all the problems of crime in the streets and other societal maladies, wiretapping and bugging is an essential tool for law enforcement agencies, though strict controls should be imposed on these agencies.

David Goldberger, former lawyer for the American Civil Liberties Union (ACLU) and currently staff lawyer for the Legal Aid Society, feels wiretapping was a thriving business before Watergate, that it has probably slowed down during Watergate, but that it will likely pick up after Watergate.

"Up to Watergate," said Goldberger, "there was a widespread acceptance of wiretapping. A crime-in-the-streets paranoia set the groundwork for the widespread use of wiretapping. Watergate has seriously discredited wiretapping as a tool. It was an example of just how dangerous wiretapping is."

Goldberger, who helped draft Illinois' eavesdropping statute, as an ACLU member, might be considered a "flaming" liberal by conservatives, especially on the wiretapping issue, but, he said, some of those with conservative leanings have come to agree with his wiretapping stand.

"FOR A WHILE, wiretapping became a sacred cow. Only knee-jerk liberals and crooks opposed its use. But suddenly, the whole center of the political spectrum is opposing it. Finally, somebody else's ox got gored."

Goldberger feels Watergate proved a brutal education for the American public but that it was only a temporary setback for wiretap proponents. He said the public is experiencing a "chilling effect" that has caused them to worry about whether they are being bugged. In this case, he said, the fear of being bugged is almost as great as if the bugging was taking place.

So what is the solution to ending the abuses of federal wiretap laws, especially when technology is moving at a fast pace and helping to refine the wiretapper's craft.

"There is no way to get rid of it (wiretapping) or to excise it from society," claimed Goldberger, pessimistically. "More laws is not the answer. The key," he said, "is the general attitude of the population and its elected representatives.

"It's hard to guess what's coming but the only potential safeguard is our democratic traditions."

Park board wrapup

No flood problem; garage site OKd

The Wheeling Park District's new garage will be built just south of the Heritage Park recreation building, 222 S. Wolf Rd.

Park board members approved the location after Village Mgr. George Passolt said the Heritage Park retention basins provided enough water storage to prevent possible flooding from the building.

Only Park Comr. Lorraine Lark disapproved of the site, saying that despite Passolt's assurances the area is prone to flooding.

The brick and masonry garage, designed by Maintenance Director Robert Ruley, will replace the present garage facility which is being converted into a meeting room. Park employes are expected to do about 30 per cent of the construction work — including heating, roofing and hanging of doors.

The park district expects to reduce the cost of the garage about 50 per cent by doing some of the work and acting as their own general contractors. Bids for the concrete work will be awarded at the April 4 park board meeting.

The new garage will be financed with funds approved in the December, 1972, referendum. Bids are also being prepared for a second referendum project, the improvement of the park-school sites. The first contracts for this work are scheduled to be approved May 30.

Park board members plan to take a careful look at the need for a park site south of the Foxboro Apartments before voting whether to release the site in exchange for a $3,000 donation.

S & L Engineering is planning to develop an industrial park north of Hintz Road south of the Wheeling Drainage Ditch. The proposed industrial park is located on about 4¼ acres of the 17 acre joint school-park site.

Park Comr. Lorraine Lark suggested the matter be studied before any decision is reached. She noted that the park district has just been granted several new park designations, and said the park board should be more hesitant about releasing these sites.

Pool rental approved

A contract to rent the outdoor pool to the Golden Arrow Day camp for $2,000 was approved by board members. The camp will rent the pool from 10:45 a.m. to 12:45 p.m. during the summer months.

Park Supt. Dave Phillips said the day camp rental will not interfere with the park district's own summer program since the pool is not used during these hours.

Youth ecology corps

Plans are being developed for an ecology corps of youngsters ages 12 to 16 years which will be used to help with the park district's outdoor maintenance this summer.

Park Supt. Dave Phillips said the district is planning to select 10 youngsters to work on school-park sites, the proposed rose garden in Chamber of Commerce Park and other park district projects.

"It's really to give them an appreciation of the outdoors and let them really know what it takes to maintain a park district," Phillips said.

The youngsters will be paid between 75 cents and $1 an hour for their work, and will also be taken on field trips by the park district.

Phillips said he hopes to hire a horticultural student intern to supervise the program, which will include some work on park landscaping.

Parks to use village signs?

The park board has sent to committee a proposal to participate in the Wheeling Chamber of Commerce's "Welcome to Wheeling" signs.

Park Comr. Gene Sackett suggested the sign, which would cost the district $250, might be a way to provide inexpensive publicity for the parks.

Following other business, the board met in executive session to discuss personnel and land acquisition.

Ex-Hoffman mayor tells bribe details

by NANCY COWGER

Hoffman Estates officials took more than three months in 1968 to settle on a $70,000 price to sell out their community, according to former Mayor Roy L. Jenkins.

Jenkins, testifying Friday in the federal trial of attorney Bernard Peskin, told how he and five other village officials decided on the $70,000 figure less than a week before they gave final approval Oct. 30, 1968 to the zoning of Kaufman and Broad, Inc.'s Barrington Square development.

At first, Jenkins said, two of the six officials were unwilling to go along with the bribery scheme but later agreed. Two others were not approached. And in the end, he said, the six received only $35,000, half the agreed-on price.

Peskin, the six ex-officials and K&B were indicted Oct. 26 by a special federal grand jury on charges of bribery, conspiracy and tax evasion. Peskin is accused of passing bribes from K&B to the former officials.

Jenkins, who was mayor from 1965 to April 1969, appeared a day earlier than expected in Peskin's trial, which will enter its sixth day today before U.S. District Judge Frank J. McGarr. The six former officials, including Jenkins, have already pleaded guilty and K&B has pleaded no contest in the bribery scheme.

THIS IS THE STORY of local corruption, as Jenkins related it:

In July or August, 1968, Peskin visited Jenkins' hardware store in Hoffman Plaza, and in a backroom conference asked Jenkins how much money it would take to get zoning okay for the K&B project. Jenkins told him the village board was "not totally in favor," and he "wasn't sure money was the way" to win zoning.

Within a few days, Jenkins visited four village trustees and a planning and zoning commission member and asked them if they "would be interested in exchanging (their) vote for dollars." No amount was mentioned. Edward Pinger, the commission member, readily agreed to "see to it any wrinkles in the planning and zoning commission were ironed out."

Trustees Gerard Meyer and Herbert Gibson also said they were interested, right from the start.

Trustee Howard Noble was not interested. He told Jenkins he planned to run for mayor in the next village election, and voting "yes" on K&B's project would cost him too many votes.

Trustee James Sloan also declined, saying he was not interested "at that point" because he "was not particularly enthused with the subdivision."

TRUSTEES WILLIAM Cowin and Ronald Franck, Jenkins' partner in the hardware store, were not contacted. Jenkins feared Cowin would "go to the authorities," and Jenkins and Franck were "not on the best of terms, personally."

Jenkins reported back to Peskin he "didn't think it would go," but would keep trying to persuade other trustees to change their minds.

On Sept. 26, the zoning commission recommended to the village board that the zoning be approved. A vote was delayed until Oct. 10, when Cowin, Gibson and Meyer voted yes; Sloan, Noble and Franck voted no, and Jenkins broke the tie with a yes vote. The village attorney was directed to prepare the formal ordinance allowing development to begin.

At a special meeting Oct. 15, the ordinance was ready. Meyer and Gibson were the only ones voting approval, and it failed. By this time, Jenkins had met separately with Sloan and Noble, trying to win them over, but they still voted no.

(Although Jenkins agreed in testimony he had told FBI agents last summer this was a "show of strength" to ensure Peskin would pay the bribes, he said Friday he could no longer stand by that statement.)

JENKINS REPORTED to Peskin "I was pretty much disturbed, incensed and tied up because I wasn't able to persuade certain persons to cast affirmative votes." They agreed to try persuasion on Cowin and Franck. Between Oct. 15 and Oct. 24 they took Cowin to dinner and discussed density and impact on schools, which "as I (Jenkins) remember, were the important considerations to Cowin." They met again, this time with Cowin, Franck and perhaps Noble (Jenkins wasn't sure), and discussed the same concerns.

At the Oct. 24 meeting, the board agreed to reconsider the project, and in the following week a meeting was held at Noble's house. Jenkins, Noble, Sloan, Gibson, Meyer and Pinger attended, and they decided to ask for $10,000 each. While Jenkins didn't tell the others, he planned to ask for $20,000 for himself, or a total of $70,000.

Jenkins relayed the dollar amount to Peskin, who checked with K&B's president Eli Broad, and reported Broad's approval back to Jenkins. But Peskin said only $35,000 would be available immediately. The rest would be distributed as building permits for the development were issued, at a rate of $100 per permit, half of which would go to the village officials.

Jenkins' bargain was kept, and Oct. 30, zoning was approved with only Cowin and Franck voting no.

DURING THE NEXT month, Peskin delivered the $35,000 to Jenkins at the Des Plaines Oasis of the Northwest Tollway. Jenkins then delivered $5,000 to each of the other five village officials, and kept $10,000 himself.

The following March or April, Jenkins called Peskin to ask for a "program, or payout plan," for the remaining $35,000. By this time, Jenkins and the other bribe recipients were out of office. Peskin responded since they no longer had village control, and would not be "able to smooth out problems" that might arise during construction," there would be no further payments.

Arraignments set for three indicted Schaumburg officials

Early April arraignment dates were set Friday for three Schaumburg officials indicted last week by a Cook County Grand Jury along with 19 other suburban figures in an alleged chemical purchases kickback scheme.

J. C. Smith, Schaumburg public works superintendent, and Roger Eiermann, a Schaumburg Park District employe, will be arraigned on charges of bribery, official misconduct and illegal interest in contracts April 3 at 10 a.m. before Chief Criminal Court Judge Joseph A. Power.

John Mittvick, a Schaumburg building inspector, will be arraigned on similar charges April 4.

The grand jury charged the officials with accepting kickbacks in the form of merchandise, gift certificates, cash or U.S. Savings Bonds in return for influencing governmental bodies to make chemical purchases from United Chemicals, Addison.

THE THREE face maximum jail sentences of 10 years and up to $25,000 each in fines if convicted, according to Assistant State's Atty. Sol Frydman.

Frydman said warrants will not be issued for the arrest of the officials involved. "They will be given an opportunity to voluntarily surrender themselves at the time of arraignment," he said.

Smith, a village employe for five years, is charged with 11 counts each of accepting bribes, official misconduct and illegal interest in contracts.

The alleged improprieties occurred between Dec. 18, 1970 and Nov. 13, 1972, according to states attorney's documentation of Smith's alleged acceptance of three television sets, two refrigerators, sporting goods, luggage and U.S. Savings Bonds totaling $225.

MITTVICK, A village employe for many years, was indicted for one incident for which he will face one count each of accepting a bribe, official misconduct and interest in contracts. He is specifically charged with accepting $150 in stereo equipment in February 1972.

He has been a village employe for many years and held custodial jobs, worked in public works department, and more recently served as building inspector.

Eiermann, maintenance supervisor for Schaumburg Park District for the past four years, is named on two indictments charging two counts each of accepting bribes and official misconduct.

According to Frydman, Eiermann is alleged to have redeemed coupons for merchandise from a United Laboratories catalog.

SMITH, AT HOME recuperating from recent surgery, could not be disturbed, according to a woman who answered the telephone.

Eiermann is "not speaking to anyone," his wife said; Mittvick could not be reached for comment.

"I am sorry that these charges were brought. I hope they are not true, but I feel any further comment would be improper," said Mayor Robert O. Atcher.

The mayor also refused to discuss "any other information" when asked if Smith and Mittvick are still employed by the village.

Neither Paul Derda, director of parks and recreation, nor Park Board Pres. Robert Bock could be reached for comment.

KATHI BARNHART portrays "Salome" in one of the nine acts based on some of Hollywood's greatest movies included in this year's version of "Passport '74." The shows will be presented nightclub-style starting Friday and Saturday, and again Friday and Saturday, April 5 and 6. Tickets, at $5 each, will be available at the door or reservations may be made by calling St. Mary's Church at 541-1450. Proceeds go to support the church.

Porter has made four such disclosures. His latest shows an income of $52,241, including $33,561 from his Evanston law practice, on a gross of $83,681, and his legislative salary of $17,500. His tax return shows federal income taxes of $11,351 and state taxes of $1,234.

He also revealed assets of $196,000, primarily from land investments in Illinois, Wisconsin, Florida and Colorado; liabilities of $69,000 and a net worth of $127,000.

Proceeds will be used for Schlickman's campaign for reelection to his sixth term in the Illinois General Assembly. Tickets are $10 per couple and $15 per family.

The event will feature "sarsaparilla," nickel beer, hot dogs and pretzels, old-fashioned decor and barbershop harmony by the Arlingtones, according to Roland Wiltse of Arlington Heights, chairman of the event. It will begin at 3 p.m.

County candidates to speak

Four Republican candidates for county offices will be speakers today at 8 p.m. at a meeting of the Regular Republican Organization of Elk Grove Township. The candidates will be Alice Ihrig, seeking the county assessor's post; Arthur Waddy and Gerald M. Pals for the county board of appeals; and Wayne Andersen of Des Plaines, candidate for county treasurer.

The candidates will discuss assessment procedures in the county and the steps that have to be followed to file assessment complaints. The public meeting will begin in the Mount Prospect Community Center, 60 S. See-Gwun, Mount Prospect. Questions will be allowed after the candidates have spoken.

County board candidate may seek injunction delaying appointments

Dem hopeful blasts Fulle on RTA

by AL MESSERSCHMIDT

A Democratic candidate for the Cook County Board has launched his campaign by criticizing Republican County Chairman Floyd Fulle of Des Plaines and by threaening to stall organization of the Regional Transportation Authority.

Norman Dachman of Niles said he will either seek a court injunction halting appointment of two suburban RTA board members until the November general election or will ask the Cook County Council of Governments to screen board members.

"In effect only Fulle and (Comr.) Joe Woods will appoint the suburban board members. That's not true representation," Dachman said.

The RTA law requires appointment of the two members by suburban commissioners within 28 days of the referendum approving RTA. Because two suburban commissioners, Charles Grupp and Charles Chaplin, are retiring, Fulle and Woods will dominate the board decision, Dachman said.

"As usual, Mr. Dachman is two hours late and four cents behind," Fulle told The Herald. "He doesn't know what he's talking about."

FULLE WILL meet this afternoon with the four suburban county board members to set up procedures for choosing the RTA members. The board members also will discuss a replacement for Comr. William Erickson of Evanston who died a mnth ago.

The law requires agreement by four of the five suburban commissioners on the RTA board appointments. "With only two active board members, where's the majority?" Dachman said. "The present makeup of the board does not fulfill the intent of the law."

Norman Dachman

Floyd T. Fulle

A COG search committee would find board candidates who are "qualified, knowledgeable about transportation," he said.

Dachman headed "Operation Yes! — RTA" a pro-referendum group active in the suburbs during the primary election. "Operation Yes" was backed by COG.

DACHMAN SAID possible election of Democrats to now-Republican county board seats could influence appointments to the RTA posts, if an injunction is obtained.

"I don't care if Republicans or Democrats are appointed. I'm for the RTA. I want qualified people appointed.

"I'm in favor of one Republican," Dachman said. "Bernie Cunningham was a member of (Gov. Richard) Ogilvie's transportation committee." Cunningham is former mayor of Park Forest and a transportation consultant active in the pro-RTA movement.

Dachman said he will "talk to my attorneys" about possible court maneuvering to influence the suburban appointments.

"I think I'm entitled to a voice. I was one of the leaders for RTA. I've been talking about transportation since 1971. I sold RTA to suburban Cook County," he said.

"Where was Fulle for three months? He didn't take a stand. He should have been a leader. Now he comes out of the woodwork."

FULLE SAID that "before the (primary) election was held we started to accumulate a file of possible candidates. The file is two inches thick already.

"Now that it's passed we have to cull through it and set up a procedure. We've talked to officials in COG. We've talked to community leaders. It's already in the mill," Fulle said.

The "one absolute criterion" for appointment from suburban Cook County is "a commitment to represent this area where they're from so they aren't bullied by the professionals (Chicago Mayor Richard) Daley will appoint. They must refuse to let it be a Daley board or a CTA board," Fulle said.

RTA vote, minus tally for Lake, passes by 13,871

Official vote totals for all but Lake County indicate the Regional Transportation Authority referendum passed by a precarious margin of 13,871 votes.

The kNOw RTA Committee that fought passage of the March 19 referendum "will definitely pursue a discovery recount," according to State Rep. Donald Totten, R-Hoffman Estates, a leader of the committee.

Official canvass totals show the proposal passed by a 201,597-vote margin in Cook County despite a majority of "no" votes from the suburban areas. Using official figures in all but Lake County, the referendum failed in the outside five counties by a margin of 187,871 votes.

"There have been reports of vote fraud in the city, and they have been turned over to the state's attorney for investigation," Totten said.

He said the reports indicate some voters in the city were not given RTA ballots, and some precinct poll watchers reported incidents of "chain-voting," whereby a voter is sent into the booth with a pre-marked ballot and brings out his blank ballot. The blank ballot is then marked and sent in with another voter, who casts that vote and brings out his own ballot, and so on. Recounts cost $5 a precinct, and Totten said offers of financial assistance have already started coming in to his office. Other suburban residents have already offered to help pay for legal costs of fighting the RTA on a constitutional basis, he said.

Vote totals indicate 43 per cent of the Chicago registered voters turned out for the RTA issue, compared to 33 per cent in suburban Cook County and 40 per cent in the outlying counties.

Official tallies in the RTA referendum for all counties except Lake, where the county clerk's canvass isn't expected until Tuesday, are:

	YES	NO
Chicago	456,475	189,039
Cook County	168,949	234,788
DuPage County	27,224	79,921
Kane County	5,865	46,187
Will County	5,995	45,298
McHenry County	2,777	27,533
Lake County (unofficial)	16,539	47,187

Vitamin E exploited by profit-minded

The doctor says

by Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

I notice your answer to a question as to the benefits of Vitamin E. I was so shocked at your flat answer that it had "no value whatever," because it showed your ignorance of all the tests that have been made with this vitamin. There are several books on vitamin E that you should get and read so you can tell your readers the truth — and not merely your personal opinion.

I am aware that the AMA has blocked all efforts to test vitamin E in the United States, but tests have been carried very successfully in Canada. It is time that AMA progresses and works to keep people well rather than just treating them after they are ill.

I am sorry that you are upset because I don't agree with your opinions. Your opinions, however, are not based on solid information. Much of the information hawking vitamin E is from profit-making organizations and does not represent the thinking of top-level scientists, nutritionists or physicians in the United States, Canada, England, or any other country.

Before going further, I should like to point out to you that the National Academy of Sciences — National Research Council's Food and Nutrition Board has just reviewed the need for various vitamins, minerals and foods. Their recommendations are based on all the available scientific information. That includes all of the valid material on vitamin E as well as other vitamins.

This is a U.S. Government organization and is not part of the AMA. The maximum amount of vitamin E they recommend for any age for a daily dietary allowance is 15 units (about 15 milligrams). You easily get these amounts in any reasonable diet. These recommendations are for 1973.

SO, IT IS not just my opinion, as you have wrongly stated, but the opinion of the best group of nutritionists and scientists in the country that you can and should get all the vitamin E you need from a reasonable diet.

The fairy tales about vitamin E have been used to bilk the gullible for many years. It has been investigated, contrary to your statement, in many leading universities in this country and abroad. This includes Canada. And incidentally, The Canadian Medical Assn. has been busy trying to protect the Canadian public against false claims originating in that country.

Vitamin E probably is necessary in small amounts. But, you don't need a special diet to get that amount. It may have some beneifts in isolated medical problems, but it does not cure arthritis, heart disease and all other human ills.

IT IS TRUE that some animals need vitamin E. The cow and the sheep, for example, will develop heart failure, if they don't get it. Man does not behave the same way. Apparently we are able to substitute other chemicals into the metabolic system and use them instead of vitamin E.

Differences in species with regard to vitamins are well known. A common well-known example is our dependence on vitamin C. We can't manufacture it in our body. But the cow and most animals make it out of carbohydrates. We lack an important enzyme that would enable us to do this. In the case of vitamin E the shoe is on the other foot, or hoof, and some animals need it much more than man.

Win at bridge

by Oswald and James Jacoby

Bidding improved since 1935

Jim: "How about some articles to show how bridge has changed in the last 40 years?"

Oswald: "The Culbertson-Sims match of 1935 might be worth using as an example. Of course, expert 1935 bidding was a trifle better than that of Ely and Jo Culbertson and a lot better than that of Hal and Dorothy Sims. Dorothy had never learned any discipline in bidding and both teams used honor tricks rather than point count for hand evaluation."

Jim: "Here's a hand where Dorothy's lack of discipline paid off. Her club opening was one of those gulpic bids. She had some cards but well below opening strength."

Oswald: "Ely's two club bid was a game force in the Culbertson system. Hal doubled and Jo Culbertson went to two hearts. Dorothy doubled that on the theory that Jo had bid her best suit."

Jim: "I see that Ely jumped to four diamonds and Jo passed. How do you explain that even in 1935 bidding."

Oswald: "Ely blamed Jo but I blame Ely. If he had just bid three diamonds Jo would have recognized the continuing force and bid. However, when he jumped to four Jo decided that there was something wrong with the whole thing and passed. For the record, Ely made six."

Speaking about Real Estate

Robert L. Nelson
President
Robert L. Nelson, Real Estate

This is the time of year when buying activity is at its highest. If you are getting ready to sell your home, here are some tips that will add immediate sales interest and appeal to prospective buyers.

Let your home smile a welcome to buyers. With a little effort on your part, your home can be sold more quickly and at a better price. These tips have proved invaluable to owners and are worth your special attention.

Preparation for showing

1. First impressions are lasting. The front door greets the prospect. Make sure it is fresh, clean and scrubbed looking. Keep lawn trimmed and edged, and the yard free of refuse.

2. Decorate for a quick sale. Faded walls and worn woodwork reduce appeal. Why try to tell the prospect how your home could look, when you can show him by redecorating? A quicker sale at a higher price will result.

3. Let the sun shine in. Open draperies and curtains and let the prospect see how cheerful your home can be. (Dark rooms do not appeal.)

4. Fix that faucet. Dripping water discolors sinks and suggests faulty plumbing.

5. Repairs can make a big difference. Loose knobs, sticking doors and windows, warped cabinet drawers and other minor flaws detract from home value. Have them fixed.

6. From top to bottom. Display the full value of your attic, basement and other utility space by removing all unnecessary articles. Brighten dark, dull basements by painting walls.

7. Safety first. Keep stairways clear. Avoid cluttered appearances and possible injuries.

8. Make closets look bigger. Neat, well-ordered closets show that the space is ample.

9. Bathrooms help sell homes. Check and repair caulking in bathtubs and showers. Make this room sparkle.

10. Arrange bedrooms neatly. Remove excess furniture. Use attractive bedspreads and freshly laundered curtains.

Weaver goes to bat for actors guild

The Hollywood scene
by Vernon Scott

HOLLYWOOD — Don't talk to actors about the unemployment crisis.

Actors are the most unemployed individuals in the United States — and have been even in boom times.

Right now there are roughly 29,000 members in the Screen Actors Guild. Eighty-five per cent of them are unemployed. By comparison, miners, auto workers, steel workers and aerospace employes are in short supply.

DENNIS WEAVER, star of television's "McCloud" series, is the new president of the Screen Actors Guild. Running on an independent ticket he rewrote SAG history by upsetting the guild's establishment officers.

"It's never been the function of the guild to supply jobs," the actor said. "But we've got to take some drastic action.

"Of those actors who are working, 75 per cent earn less than $3,500 a year. According to the government that's below the poverty level. Almost all of the membership is forced to work at other jobs.

"But the public reads about Richard Burton or Clint Eastwood making a million dollars a picture and believes all actors are rich. They don't represent the actor in Hollywood at all. Only 4 per cent of actors earn a comfortable living of $25,000 a year."

WEAVER, A deliberate sort of man, a native of Oklahoma, is aware he was elected to office as a reformer: "When people aren't working they think any kind of a change will improve a situation.

"Actors have been forced to live on residuals from television reruns. And those payments are altogether too low, especially for those episodes shown two or three times in the same year.

"Without reruns we'd be working in original shows and being paid a lot more money.

"When I played Chester on 'Gunsmoke' we made 39 episodes a year. Those numbers have decreased gradually over the years to a point where most series make 22 segments or less. The number of jobs wiped out is enormous.

"So the guild is working on that problem. We are seeking ways to stimulate movie and television production. We're not producers. Our job originally was to insure good wages and working conditions. But we must do more.

"ONE BIG HEADACHE is the government itself. It is Hollywood's biggest competitor. The government spends half a billion dollars — that's right, $500 million — every year on training films, industrial firms and Armed Forces films. Every bureau and department has its own film arm.

"The bad part of it is our own government uses non-professional actors. They use non-union performers. There is also duplication, overlapping and waste in government films.

"More and more one department makes a film that is made a few weeks later by still another department. And guild members lose more jobs.

"We figure at least $150 million of that money — taxpayers money — belongs to professional actors who should be doing the work. As a taxpayer, I don't like the waste and depriving professionals of jobs.

"THE GUILD IS doing its best not to price ourselves too high and discourage production. We have two types of contracts — one for pictures costing more than a million dollars, and one for those costing less. The less expensive films are given certain liberties.

"And the guild is working to get more work for actresses. there is a disproportionate number of women acting today as compared with men.

"The guild's Women's Conference is keeping track of the number of TV roles and movie parts, compiling figures so we can show producers and writers how women are being ignored on the screen.

"There are committees working on minority inequalities, too.

"With massive discontent and unemployment in the ranks the guild is working overtime to help the situation. But it won't be easy."

Nixon's Jesuit speechwriter promoted to 'spokesman'

WASHINGTON — The Rev. John McLaughlin, S. J., President Nixon's $25,000-a-year Jesuit assistant, is no longer a speechwriter, according to the White House press office.

"He is involved in international humanitarian projects, such as the Southeast Asian refugees," explained Press Secretary Ron Zeigler's staff assistant, Tom DeCair.

This column has tried repeatedly to obtain an interview with Rev. McLaughlin, but his secretary has disclosed that he has been either on extended lecture tours in such distant places as California, or else has been encumbered with a heavy schedule of TV, radio and local lecturing.

DeCair was asked, therefore, if it is not true that whlle Rev. McLaughlin is no longer a Nixon speechwriter, he is quite definitely a Nixon speechmaker.

Replied DeCair: "Yes, like many others in government, Dr. McLaughlin is a spokesman for this administration."

THIS IS TO wallow in understatement. For the likes of Rev. McLaughlin have not been seen since the oratorical heyday of ex-Vice President Spiro Agnew.

For example, there is Rev. McLaughlin's having engaged his Jesuit seminary classmate, The Rev. Robert Drinan, S. J., in what might be described as "The Jesuit Battle of Pennsylvania Avenue."

Rev. Drinan, D-Mass., is the first Catholic priest ever elected to Congress (although by no means the first clergy-congressman — for there have been 95 Protestants). On Jan. 20 of this year, Congressman Drinan described the Nixon administration as "the most corrupt administration in the history of the Republic."

President Nixon had no need to respond to this charge, not when his Jesuit assistant promptly counterattacked — by comparing Congressman Drinan to the Sanhedrin.

REV. McLAUGHLIN went on to charge Father Drinan with rape of justice for not having disqualified himself from the House Judiciary Committee's impeachment inquiries, considering a Drinan impeachment bill.

Rev. Drinan had already brushed off a GOP suggestion to this effect, by replying cooly that no Congressman who introduces a consumer protection bill is expected to disqualify himself from the voting.

But the usually doughty and intrepid Massachusetts Congressman amazingly, and promptly, backed away from McLaughlin's comparison of Drinan to the Sanhedrin (which put Jesus Christ on trial). For he replied with an uncharacteristically limp rejoinder, "My intuition tells me to decline all comment."

This left distinct impression that President Nixon has quite cleverly discoverd that the way to neutralize one pesky Jesuit is to use another.

MEANWHILE, REV. McLaughlin, as Nixon speechmaker, has announced around the nation:

• "I think Nixon will be viewed historically, and in his own time, as a great moral leader."

Religion today

by Rev. Lester Kinsolving

• "The churches have their own histories of irregularities, disorders and scandals."

• "My feeling is that senior officials in the White House are no better, no worse, no more sinful, or less sinful, no more sullied or unsullied morally. ethically, or spiritually than people in all other occupations — including the clergy."

This column has by no means been reluctant to expose ecclesiastical venality. But we know of no denominational headquarters (or even pseudo-denominations) who have currently amassed so many criminal indictments charging the bugging of rivals and the burglarizing of psychiatrists

On the other hand, there is the apparently apocryphal remark which has been attributed to the late Al Capone, as he was boarding the boat for Alcatraz: "Well, nobody's perfect."

College art students win honors Bidding improved since 1935

Art students from Oakton Community College and Harper College captured top honors at the second annual Community College Student Art Exhibition at Elgin Community College March 15.

The winners were selected from more than 50 participants from seven community colleges. Winning the Best of Show award was Louis Schutz, an Oakton sophomore from Skokie. His print, "Man, What Is It?" was given a $100 award. Lynette Franz, a Harper sophomore from Elk Grove Village, was awarded the $50 prize for Best of Category in Prints and Drawings for her "Zippered Gabardine." The $50 award for Best of Category in Photography was shared by two students from Oakton. Protest 'disappointing'

A few days ago, I read that Lar "America First" Daly, the perennial candidate, was going to be demonstrating in front of the Conrad Hilton Hotel during the President's speech, and wanting a picture of one of Illinois' folk heroes, I went there to try to get one. Lar Daly wasn't there, but several hundred other people were.

Actually, as demonstrations go, this one was a minor disappointment, as one would expect some of the finer minds of Madison, Ann Arbor, Iowa City and Chicago to be a little more original in their protests. There were, though, a few interesting points. For instance: One onlooker was complaining about the "garbage" out here. "What garbage, the street looks clean?" "No, no the garbage parading on the sidewalks." Two photographers were overheard discussing the lack of creativity of today's youth, not like the days "we were demonstrating." Both looked to be about 25 years old. One loud speaker announced "Nixon's not the first President to have a crook as vice president — Eisenhower had one, too!"

A science teacher at a convention at the Hilton noted all the people "Mil-housing around."

A four-piece band — a violinist, drummer, tuba player and saxophone player — were playing "Hail to the Chief" as a funeral dirge. Signs ranged from "Throw the Bum Out" and "Welcome to the North" to "God Loves Nixon." One Christian group kept driving around the block in a mini-car announcing "God loves you, God loves America, God loves the President." While one soul wore a devil's mask and carried a sign saying "Hell, I'm not responsible."

It seemed that the most original signs were carried by middle-aged people. One had a nude Nixon racing past the White House with the caption, "Streak him out." One picket was unable to get past the police line and get back to his job. Several fringe groups, supporting everything from the Gallo boycott to the Equal Rights Amendment, were present to make their views known.

Out of the 400 or 500 people at the demonstration, at least 50 of them were photographers, and after awhile several of them started photographing each other. One of these photographers discovered after two hours in the rain that his camera was not properly loaded and that he wouldn't get any pictures.

Come to think of it, Lar Daly missed an interesting demonstration after all.

'Make highway beautiful'

Since it seems to be a matter of importance for Arlington Heights to make one of its major thoroughfares, namely Northwest Highway, a scenic one for travelers and citizens alike, I suggest as you are traveling west between Euclid and Wilke, you take note of all the beautiful planting that has been done on the south side of the street. Of course, when you get to the area between the 1100 block and the 1500 block, you will undoubtedly notice that someone must have goofed in their planning! Maybe you can tell me how that piece of plantless plain occurred! Why planting was stopped at one point and begun at another some blocks away? Before the village worries unnecessarily about the lighting they wish to put in along the railroad right-of-way between Vail and Wilke, I wish they would finish what they started some time ago; the planting.

Homeowners that live across from that stretch of plainness were told for four years that the entire stretch of right-of-way was to be planted. Every time trees and shrubs were cut down we were reassured that something would replace them. I, for one, am not satisfied with the replacement, namely grass. It does not begin to replace even a few trees and shrubs that were taken out. The neighborhood that sees that mistake of poor planning every day thinks it's only fair to expect the village to keep its promises, and not three more years from now! Plant now, light later!

'Will you help?'

I would like to use your newspaper to answer two letters that you printed March 18.

Mary Rosenast: Why would you like Dr. Finalyson to state whether he'll perform abortions? The question should be "are all you teenagers going to stop having sex?!" Are birth control measures going to work, when they are used? Should a 15-year-old girl be forced to carry a baby she doesn't want? Why? To punish her for having sex? To punish her parents? You're not going to stop people from having sex by closing clinics and refusing birth control devices and abortions to teenagers (and older). Shouldn't these misguided kids be helped rather than shunned? Educated rather than prsecuted?

Joan Webster Anderson: Why are you so interested in those 4 million abortions last year? Why don't you and Mary offer your services every day of the week to harassed young mothers or open a day care center? Maybe if you offered something more concrete than useless sympathy or letters opposing abortion, some people wouldn't have one. Children require a hell of a lot more than "morning lawn" and "early dawn" and other poetic rhymes. Are you willing to give up your luxuries in order to buy shoes and coats and medical care for the babies that are already born and have parents with no money? I know this could be done, after talking to social workers in our area. There are plenty of people in just the Northwest suburbs who will be glad to accept your money to buy necessary items for their children. Every one of you out there against abortion — back up your position! Call a church, call the Wheeling Township office, the Northwest Opportunity Center in Rolling Meadows or the Countryside Center for the Handicapped in Palatine. Prove your humanity, give something besides your opinion!

RTA board needs diversity

The passage of the Regional Transit Authority referendum has, in turn, created an unfortunate wave of maneuvering and speculation over appointment to suburban seats on the RTA board.

The line-up for the part-time $25,000 - a - year suburban posts, which includes many politicians, should only be the starting point in the search for appointees. The decision process should be open. Politics and Republican allegiance should not determine selection of the board members.

Republican Cook County Board members will name the two suburban RTA representatives. The RTA law passed last spring by the legislature — which should be amended — now requires appointment of the board within 28 days.

As many as 20 persons have indicated interest in the appointments, but no procedure for selection has been announced.

Now is the time to pick up where open slatemaking for the primary election fell off.

The county board members should adopt as open a procedure as possible for reviewing RTA board applicants. The candidates' previous views on mass transit should be examined. Willingness to devote time to improving mass transit in the suburbs should be an issue.

The Herald disagrees with Comr. Floyd Fulle's contention that prime criteria for selection should include the desire to become a GOP "team" player in a battle against the four board members named by Chicago Mayor Richard Daley. Individuality could lead to important, innovative transit improvements.

However, the Republican board members must be firm in avoiding dominance by Daley appointees and must avoid rubber-stamping Chicago Transit Authority wishes. Compromise will be the key because a stand-off board where city and suburban representatives quibble and accomplish nothing also is unacceptable.

The importance of RTA in metropolitan Chicago demands appointments of representatives who present credentials that include expertise, integrity and ability to develop long-range solutions to mass transit problems.

We fear another session where the politically powerful — the township committeemen, the mayors or ex-mayors — will be named to the RTA board because of who, not what, they know. Although we do not assume that the committeemen and other political figures are not qualified for board appointment, the Herald urges Fulle and other GOP county board members to look further than the county Republican political community before naming appointees.

The two suburban Cook County representatives, coupled with two members from outlying counties, will shape the transit future of the metropolitan area.

He supports impeachment

As a conservative Republican, I have been a loyal supporter of Congressman Philip Crane since moving into this area 3½ years ago. I voted for Richard Nixon in 1972; however, in the light of what appears to be considerable evidence of betrayal of the public trust and even criminal activity on his part, I have recently felt compelled to join the Impeach Nixon Committee in asking that the President be tried by the Senate.

Last Saturday, March 9, Congressman Crane met with our group and, as a potential grand juror, defended his position of neutrality on the question of impeachment. Even though I do not agree with his stand, I do feel that his opinion was both valid and consistent. However, I was surprised and disappointed when Mr. Crane, in answer to the question, stated that were Mr. Nixon running for President tomorrow, he would again vote for him.

Although I would not have expected Mr. Crane to give a negative answer to this question, I do not for a minute believe that he would really vote for a man whose administration has been so destructive to his party and to public confidence in government as well as disruptive of our nation's economy. Perhaps Mr. Crane's answer was an off-guard emotional remark. I hope that it did not spring from the kind of blind loyalty that we have witnessed among those with whom Mr. Nixon preferred to surround himself. I personally feel that this remark is merely what Mr. Crane deems to be most politically expedient for him in his district at this time. For this reason, I have lost considerable respect for Mr. Crane as my representative.

Reyes' news needed

In response to Carolyn L. Wilson's letter (March 7) criticizing the Herald's "overemphasizing the story on Reye's Syndrome:"

The articles I read in the Herald and other newspapers "frightened" me, too, and "didn't help me keep calm." Reye's syndrome is a frightening disease. But I am grateful for being able to learn as much accurate information about the disease as is possible for the news media to present. Being informed about potential emergencies can prepare us to cope with them wisely should they occur.

Can we get too much information — terrifying though it may be — if having and using that information appropriately may help us and our children's physicians save our children's lives?

No news is not better than bad news — in this case.

Ignorance is not always bliss — ultimately.

Tom Wellman's column

TV network news style changing

by TOM WELLMAN
Chief Editorial Writer

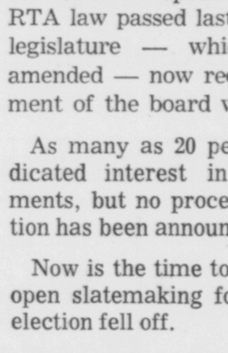

When a TV network news anchorman dies, there's the sudden sensation that a close friend has just died.

All of them — Chet Huntley, Walter Cronkite, Harry Reasoner, David Brinkley, John Chancellor — have their voices so firmly etched into our memories, and their faces are almost more recognizable than Richard Nixon or Henry Kissinger.

To critics of television, these men are showmen and not newsmen, in the old sense of reporters who work on the streets or on the telephone to come up with stories. They are world wide celebrities, and we on newspapers sometimes begrudge their instant celebrity status.

Night after night at 6 p.m. these men who work in windowless studios in New York or Washington enter our homes. After time passes, they become like members of the families whose tale of news can make us laugh, make us cry or make us understand.

So it was with Chet Huntley, and his death has the brief weight of an old friend dying. But his death marks also a basic change in TV journalism, too.

Chet Huntley

Huntley and Brinkley teamed up in 1956, in the dawning hours of TV network news. According to press accounts, NBC officials tried unsuccessfully to obtain author John Hersey or Henry Cabot Lodge Jr. to succeed John Cameron Swayze. H & B were the third choices.

The team's popularity blossomed during the late 1950s and early 1960s. The triumphs and errors of the Eisenhower and Kennedy years were chronicled nightly by the two, with dour, severe Chet balancing off the urbane, witty David.

Their popularity gradually slipped during the later 1960s. Huntley split from the team in 1970 to tend his Big Sky venture in Montana. He died of cancer Wednesday, only three days before Big Sky was to be dedicated.

Huntley, as he appeared before us during those years, was not a working newsman, and that says something about the decline of a journalism era. Perhaps it says something, too, about the kind of news we watch in the 1970s.

Today, the era of the cosmetic anchorman is slipping, although it is still a popular TV news format. But Channel 2's team of Jacobson-Kurtis insists they are newsmen, not anchormen. Now the stations increasingly contend that a pretty face and voice is not enough to please.

On CBS-TV, where the grandfatherly (and the capable newsman) Cronkite reigns, there's solid reporting from the Dan Schorrs, the Dan Rathers and the Fred Grahams. At NBC, Carl Stern, that network's legal specialist, has produced several national "scoops" for his network.

The news today is far too complex to permit an anchorman to handle it alone. Watergate's legal thicket of indictments and tapes and the energy crisis' tangle of allotments and oil reserves are but two topics where expert reporters are more convincing than anchormen.

We'll never desert the era where we need someone of the caliber of Huntley or Cronkite to read us a part of the news. That's why Chet Huntley was a great anchorman, for he did his job well. Now, however, the anchorman's losing many of his responsibilities to his men in the field.

That, however, won't erase Chet Huntley's contribution to TV journalism. To most of us inveterate TV watchers, the man and his style shall be remembered.

Bomb threat

Even a hoax can be a frightening way to interrupt a vacation flight

SECURITY WAS tight around the bomb-threatened plane. Passengers and luggage were unloaded so that a thorough search could be made. (Photos by Paul Logan)

Story and photos by Paul Logan

Bomb. The word itself is a threat. And for vacation-bound passengers aboard a flight to Florida recently, a report of a bomb aboard their airplane became a frightening experience. Herald Associate Sports Editor Paul Logan had it happen to him. Paul and his wife Linda were on a plane forced to land in Louisville, Ky., while a search was made for explosives aboard the plane. Here is their story.

Most everyone on the DC-10 jet was enjoying a drink. All had a right to be happy — Florida was the destination.

The nonstop Eastern Airlines flight, scheduled to arrive in Sarasota about 5:30 p.m., didn't live up to its billing. Instead, the two-engine shuttle service from snow to sun landed in Louisville, Ky.

"Folks, I didn't want to alarm you earlier when I announced we had to make an unscheduled stop," said the captain, his voice slightly cracking. "But we received a call from Midway that there was a bomb aboard."

He added that we would have to leave the plane, but it wasn't necessary. The pushing and shoving resembled grade schoolers exiting a room at the end of a day.

WE WERE HERDED aboard an old school bus and taken to an empty terminal, located a short distance from the plane. The latter was left on a distant and deserted landing strip — far enough away so no damage could be done to anything or anyone if it blew.

Quite a few passengers looked for a restroom, but airport officials had closed off the section in which we were detained so that no one could leave the area.

Minutes after arriving at the terminal, we were ordered back aboard the bus. When we neared the plane, we saw a long row of suitcases. About 100 yards separated the two.

Both passengers and flight crew stayed between these inanimate objects, either of which might shatter the quiet but sultry Kentucky afternoon.

We were told the wait wouldn't be too long. Officials were waiting for the FBI before making the search.

The captain remained calm. He said that this had been his fifth time — hoaxes all.

AFTER ABOUT AN hour's delay, airline personnel and federal agents began taking five people at a time to the luggage area. Bag after bag was searched. It had to be there for the plane had been OKd.

The longer we waited to check our belongings, the more people began sizing each other up.

An hour and a half after touching down, the plane resumed its southeastern path to Florida. No bomb had been found. Still, most people would have felt much safer at 30,000 feet had one been discovered and taken off.

The airline hostesses passed out "drinks on the house" for the remainder of the flight, but it wasn't enough to put color back into a host of white knuckles . . .

AN INVALID MAN is helped aboard the bomb-free plane. The nonstop flight was forced to land in Louisville, Ky., after Midway Airport received a threatening call.

A METHODICAL SEARCH of every piece of luggage fails to find a bomb. Herald sportswriter Paul Logan and his wife were among nearly 100 passengers who had to make an unscheduled landing at Louisville, Ky.

Hersey makes Bloom panic but Trojans rally to win

by JIM COOK

CHAMPAIGN — What did Hersey hope to prove?

Hadn't the Huskies already accomplished the 66-year-old impossible dream of playing basketball downstate?

Wasn't that enough?

Didn't somebody insist the rest was gravy?

Well, there was a bone in the gravy and Hersey picked it with Illinois' second-place team in the opening game of the state basketball quarterfinals Friday afternoon.

In a remarkable display of disciplined basketball, Hersey proved, without a shadow of a doubt, that it can play with the best in the state, under intense pressure and in front of 14,592 critics in Assembly Hall.

Chicago Heights Bloom, which lost to state champion Proviso East, 61-56, in the title game, survived with a 56-51 victory over Hersey, but as Trojan head coach Wes Mason admitted, "Our kids were sweating at halftime. We haven't been behind much this season, so this was a shock to them and they really had trouble adjusting."

For the fourth game in a row, Hersey made its opposition look anything like the heavy favorite that was tabbed to easily extinguish the Cinderella Huskies.

The state's previously top-rated Maine South Hawks, the Evanston Wildkits and the Waukegan Bulldogs were all described as "putrid to pitiful" against Hersey who somehow always managed to play "only good enough to win."

Nobody gave the Huskies credit for creating the ruins. Hersey always caught their opponents on an "off night."

But Huskie head coach Roger Steingraber straightened everyone out at the press conference following the Bloom game. "These last two weeks, we've really been coming on. I told my kids that I felt we could beat Maine South and people laughed."

"I was the same way against Evanston and Waukegan. And when we finally made it down here and were up against Bloom, nobody gave us a chance.

"But you saw what kind of a job we did out there. We got beat and I've got kids in the lockerroom crying because they thought they should have won. And before the game, I believed it too . . . with all my heart."

Hersey responded like the tournament favorite during the first half with near-perfection execution, a barbed wire 2-3 zone defense and enough desire and aggressiveness to force Mason to signal for three timeouts as frustrated Bloom tried to reorganize.

Off the opening tip, Hersey methodically gnawed to a 4-0 lead, controlling both boards and completely voiding Bloom's inside game.

Trojan forward Audie Matthews, billed as the best prep cager in the state, didn't campaign for those raves in the first half. Forced beyond good percentage shot range, the 6-4½ senior launched 13 shots, but cashed only three.

Instead, the mobile leaper crashed the boards with teammates Robert McCoy and Emir Hardy to provide Bloom with an occasional second offensive shot and a rare third opportunity.

By the time Hersey had impressed upon the Trojans that favorites do not have an automatic bye into the semi-finals, they had upped their margin to 10-4 before finally settling for a 14-10 cushion after the first period.

Immediately established was Hersey's poise, patience and hunger. Dave Corzine, the Huskies' 6-foot-11 center, and forwards Clyde Glass and Rich Madison were devastating on the boards, blocking out underneath and leaping higher than they had all season.

Junior guard Tim Conard was busy holding the hot hand with six first-quarter points while Mark Krause handled the ball brilliantly against Bloom's touted pressure defense and popped in four points.

Bloom waited for Hersey to cool off in the second period, but the Huskies considered the thought an insult and promptly rattled off an 11-2 spree that increased its advantage to a king-sized 25-12 difference.

Corzine, who soared to the top of every college recruiter's most-wanted list, was an intimidating vacuum under the defensive boards and began clicking from the outside at the opposite end.

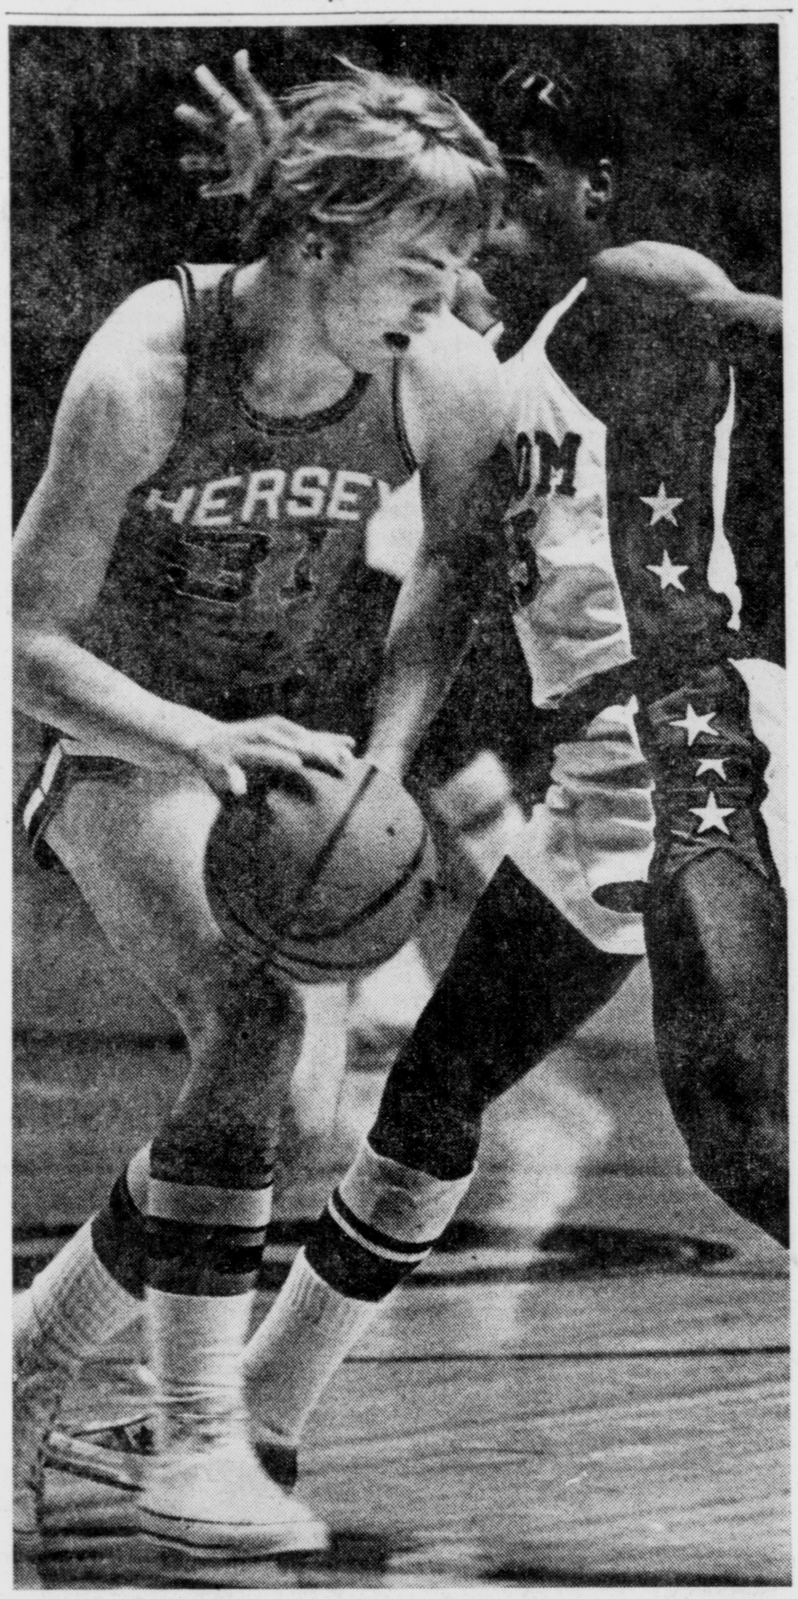

He followed a Conard off-balance lay-up with a 20-footer, swished another jumper from the corner, drove the lane for an easy deuce and potted still another long-range attempt from deep in the corner.

Hersey maintained the margin at 27-14 before Matthews nibbled away for a free throw and a 15-footer at the first-half buzzer which whittled the Huskies' lead to 29-20.

The conversation in the press box during the 10-minute break centered jointly around Bloom's inability to penetrate Hersey's shifting zone and Corzine's awesome performance that netted 10 first-half points and nine boards.

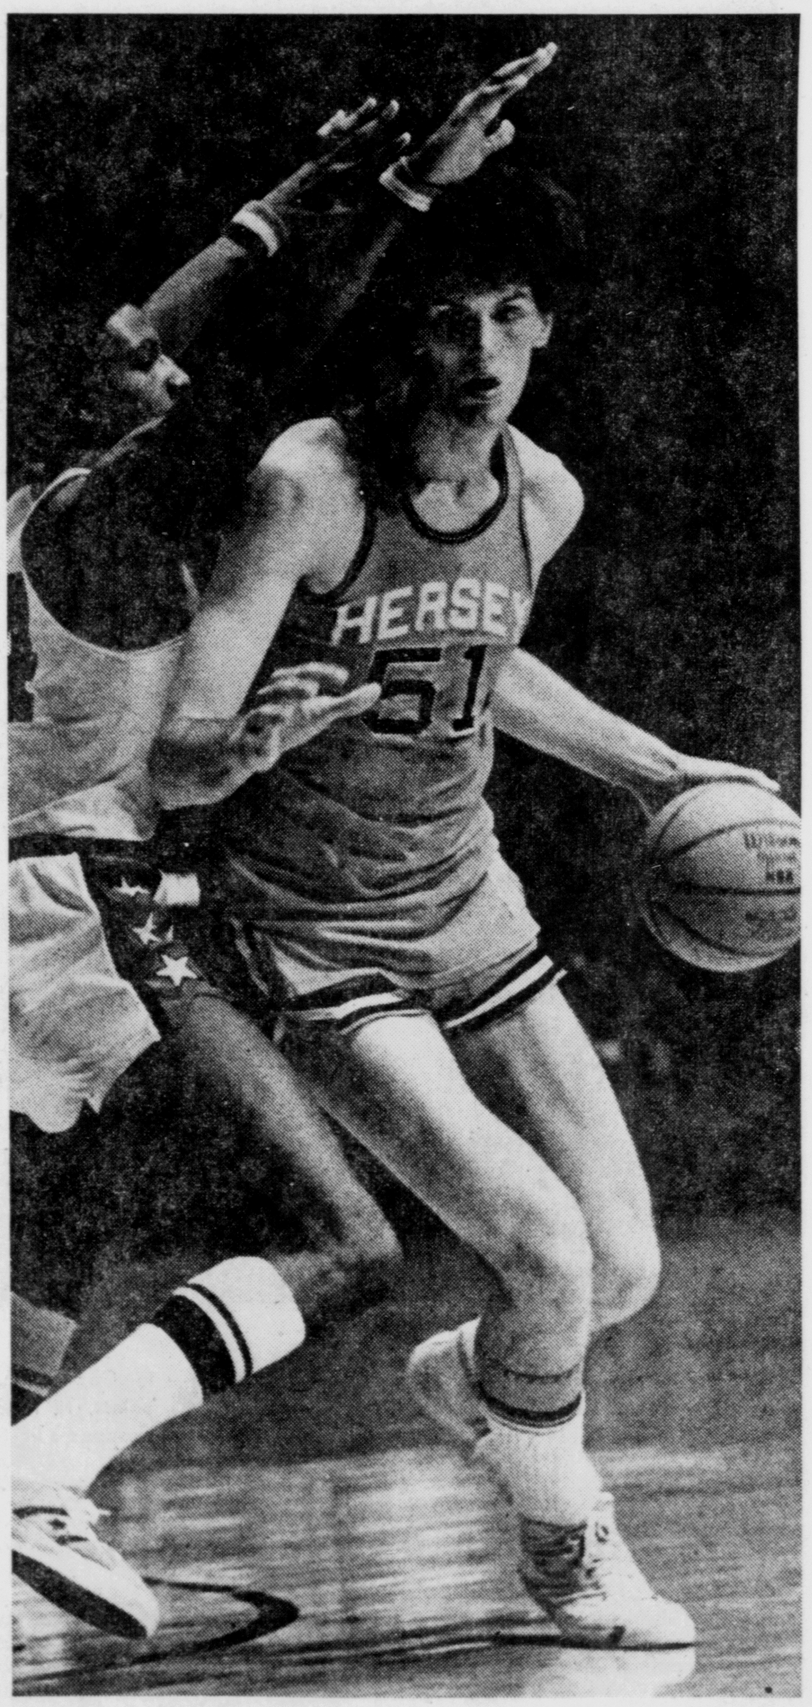

Bloom, though, picked up where it left off at the intermission when Matthews'

HUSKIE DRIVE. Hersey's Mark Krause looks for an opening as Bloom's Alvin Higgins, a master at drawing charging fouls, sets himself on defense in state tournament opener Friday. Krause contributed 10 points, hitting 8-of-10 from the line, but the Huskies fell by five points, 56-51, to the eventual state runnerup.

MIRRORING CONFIDENCE as always, Hersey head coach Roger Steingraber gives his young men guidance during a tense tournament moment in Champaign. An area triumph...even in defeat

Bob Frisk
Sports Editor

CHAMPAIGN — It was a beginning, and that's really all anyone asked for.

Some team had to make the breakthrough. Some school had to smash the state tournament jinx that had been haunting area basketball teams for so many years.

Hersey High School lost its first game here Friday afternoon to eventual state runnerup Bloom of Chicago Heights, but they gained a very important victory just by reaching the Assembly Hall on the University of Illinois campus.

There may not be another sports event that so stirs the public as a state high school basketball tournament. It's difficult just to describe how that Hersey victory last Tuesday over Waukegan pulled these communities together, if only for a short time.

It's far too common in this area to see petty jealousies between communities and schools spoil what should be good working relationships. It's often a very selfish attitude that seems to suggest, "Well, if our school can't win, then to heck with yours."

Last week I saw a rallying behind this Hersey basketball team that was so very refreshing. It obviously wasn't unanimous — there are always some cynics — but the interest generated in this drive to Champaign and the state finals was absolutely incredible.

You heard people talking about it no matter where you went. You could feel the excitement build with each passing day. People approached this sports staff and talked about the Hersey basketball team who had never talked about high school sports before.

There obviously is so much more to a high school sports program than just basketball, but a state tournament seems to involve so many people. Anyone who has ever attended high school can appreciate the drama and excitement that comes at tourney time.

No, Hersey did not beat Bloom, but they scared 'em to death here and gave the many Huskie fans who helped pack the Assembly Hall some glorious moments. That first half was a delight. Bloom was in a state of panic.

As expected, the Huskies' style of play disrupted the swift Trojans, and if Hersey had survived that opener, they just might have gone all the way. Anyway, it would have been fun to watch them try to slow down some of those other run-and-shoot clubs, including state champion Proviso East.

I guess I'm greedy. I can't settle for just getting an area team to Champaign for the first time. I try to figure out ways they could have won it all.

It would be best not to bring up my state tournament predictions, but at least I was consistent. I missed them all, but I never claimed to be Jimmy The Greek. Anyway, even Jimmy The Greek picked Bobby Riggs over Billie Jean King.

When I examined the state tourney field, I honestly felt that the winner of that first game Friday would go all the way to the title encounter. It was the luck of the draw that forced Hersey to catch Bloom in the opener. It could have been much more enjoyable to catch an Oswego (how did Aurora East ever lose to that club?) or Breese Mater Dei or even Chicago Morgan Park.

No matter what anyone says, Hersey could have played with anyone in the state finals. That patience on the attack, that defense, and a very talented young man named Dave Corzine carried Hersey to the Assembly Hall and could have carried them to the wire with any club.

This wasn't a team loaded with great basketball skills down the line, but they blended so well together and developed a positive attitude that is so very important.

Those kids felt they could beat anyone, and it was coach Rog Steingraber who helped instill this attitude in their tournament performances. Rog always had a positive approach to any confrontation, disregarding the reputation of an opponent with the sincere feeling that his team could play with anyone. He was right.

And then there was Dave Corzine.

He was magnificent. Is there any other way to describe it?

Dave was magnificent all the way down the stretch on the pressure-packed tournament trail.

So much was written about his attitude that it got to be ridiculous. So much more time could have been spent discussing the many skills of this 6-foot-11 senior and the obvious pressures he's experienced since he first entered high school.

When you're that big, and that good, everything you do is put under a microscope. People seem to expect spectacular performances every time out, but they forget this is still an impressionable youngster. They forget he's just a teenager.

LaGrange coach Ron Nikcevich has been around. He's coached a state champion, many All-Staters, and he's seen many youngsters perform in Illinois high school basketball. Here's the way he evaluated Dave Corzine Friday night in Champaign:

"Corzine has million-dollar potential," said Nikcevich. "He has a world of potential and tremendous talent. I don't care what's been said about his attitude. I like the kid. If I were a recruiter, I'd sleep at his door . . . anything to make him aware that he's my No. 1. If I were starting a college team, my No. 1 man would be a big power player like Corzine."

Corzine and his Hersey associates certainly didn't disgrace themselves in Champaign and although the visit was a short one, it provided the breakthrough this area so desperately needed.

It was a boost for the Mid-Suburban Conference and what better time to send a team to Champaign than 1973-74, easily the league's finest year in basketball with many solid representatives. I hope people stop knocking the Mid-Suburban for its basketball entries. This league can play with anyone.

The door now is open to the Illinois Assembly Hall. It's been locked to this area for so many years.

Let's keep it open, just as we should start opening those area gymnasiums in the summer so the kids can play basketball . . . and also start building better grade school programs.

A season ends, but let's not forget what it was like to experience the electrifying excitement of that magnificent Hersey march to Champaign and the Elite Eight.

It was a beginning.

ALL-STATE EFFORT. Although he hasn't been making the All-State teams, Hersey's Dave Corzine turned in All-State performances in the Huskies' dramatic stretch run to Champaign. Here the 6-foot-11 senior maneuvers around Bloom's Kelvin Small in opening game Friday in state tournament. Corzine turned in another magnificent effort, but the Huskies dropped a 56-51 decision.

Huskies bow out

last-second fadeaway found the cords.

Hardy, the Trojans' 6-6 center, went on a tear. He clicked on a short jumper in the key and was the recipient of a perfect Matthews pass on a Bloom fast break that trimmed the Hersey margin to 33-28 midway through period three.

Then came what Mason termed as the turning point of the game. With 2:55 still remaining in the third quarter, Corzine was whistled for a technical foul when he slammed the ball to the floor.

Matthews capitalized on the opportunity — cashing the charity toss and coming right back with a 15-foot jumper on the ensuing inbounds play to bring Bloom within 33-31.

Having watched a 13-point lead dissipate, though, Hersey was not about to allow Bloom the luxury of a rout.

The Huskies played the Trojans to a 37-37 standoff after three bells and matched Bloom's six points during the next two minutes to deadlock the contest at 43.

But it was all Bloom for 120 seconds. McCoy shook loose for an offensive rebound conversion and a 15-foot jump shot, Matthews cashed a short banker on a fast break and playmaking guard Alvin Higgins canned both ends of a one-and-one to ignite the Trojans, 50-43 with 2:36 left.

Hersey hadn't made the 150-mile trip for a quick shower. Madison and Corzine both connected on clutch bonus free throws to sever Bloom's lead to 50-47 at the 1:11 mark.

Krause, diving head-long through the air, created a loose ball on Bloom's ensuing trip down the floor and instinctively shuffled it safely under Hersey's defensive basket.

But the pass caught out-positioned McCoy right in the numbers for an unmolested Bloom bucket.

Conard matched it with a crucial bank shot with :32 remaining, but Bloom's pesky Higgins, the fastest man on the floor, pilfered a pass that would have brought the Huskies within one and sealed the game with a fastbreak basket.

With just three seconds left and Krause in the process of drilling two free throws to fill out the final 56-51 score, Steingraber captured the attitude Hersey had lived by over the last month of the season.

He was up on his feet shouting instructions — full court pressure . . . get the ball to either Conard or Corzine — to his beaten warriors.

Hersey, in dominating the majority of a game against the second-place team in the state, lost in the score department only.

Its unprecedented triumphs, battling to Champaign in the first place and then representing its school and community with a truly spectacular performance, will be what everyone remembers most.

'Corzine is best big man' praise two head coaches

by JIM COOK

"Dave Corzine is the finest big man in the state."

The comment by Hersey head coach Roger Steingraber about his unanimous all-tourney selection was not met with raised eyebrows, conflicting headshakes or doubting smirks.

None of the more than 30 writers that jammed into the confined press conference room dared to question the sermon that Steingraber had preached all season.

The smoke that billowed from the thick cigar in Steingraber's hand was not a screen for his appraisal of Hersey's heartbreaking 56-51 loss to the state's top-ranked but runnerup Bloom Trojans.

"Daves done a lot of growing up these past three weeks," the coach in the pulpit continued. "He's going to make some university a basketball power."

Corzine had just finished making Hersey a high school giant. He paced the Huskies to a berth among the top eight teams in the state with an extraordinary performance down the tournament trail.

His 7-for-14 shooting from the floor, perfect 4-for-4 free throw conversion and 12 rebounds in the quarterfinal battle doesn't include his intimidating posture in the pivot, crafty passing ability or highly-efficient ball-handling talent.

Bloom's head coach Wes Mason immediately confirmed the praise when he followed Steingraber on stage.

"I felt the best two big men in the state were Whitehead (Waukegan's 6-8 Jerome) and Corzine. But after watching the game Tuesday (Hersey beat Waukegan, 39-31 at the Northwestern Super sectional), Corzine completely outplayed Whitehead. Yes, I'd say the fact that Corzine is the best big man in the state is an accurate statement.

"Corzine's outside shooting almost beat us. Our scouting report said we couldn't give him the 10 to 12-foot shot, but we found out the hard way that he's just as accurate from 20 feet.

"We didn't hear anything about his passing, either, but he drops them off pretty well underneath. We based our game plan on keeping him outside and I thought we did a decent job, but he hurt us anyway."

Steingraber was rich in his plaudits for Bloom.

"They're a great team with great athletes and a great coach. Audie Matthews (the Trojans' 6-4½ All-American) showed us what he can do. I think he was the one who got their adrenalin flowing in the second half.

Roger Steingraber

"They had second efforts on the boards and their quickness . . . although it didn't bother us as much as some people thought it might . . . showed when the ball hit the floor. The way they spin off their screens is just super quick."

Although Mason pinpointed the turning point of the game at the 2:55 mark of the third quarter when Corzine was assessed a technical foul, Steingraber didn't buy it.

"No, he didn't do it to get us fired up," Steingraber reasoned although Bloom was in the process of erasing a 13-point deficit.

"It was just a momentary thing. He wasn't mad at the officials. I think the turning point was when Bloom got into a one-and-one (free throw) situation early in the second half.

"They came out playing harder than we did. I think that it was just because they were quicker. Our kids gave it everything they had and then some. We got ruffled a little bit in the second half, but these kids played a dedicated game."

Nobody was about to argue with that statement, either.

Proviso East handles cold-shooting Bloom

by MIKE KLEIN

CHAMPAIGN — All-Stater Audie Matthews was sick, one of the tournaments best kept secrets, and Wes Mason had a bum scouting report so it's Proviso East, not favored Bloom, atop Illinois High School Class AA basketball.

Bloom's 6-4½ Matthews, good enough that he's rated a phone call from UCLA's John Wooden, suffered subpar six-of-23 field goal shooting here Saturday night during Proviso East's 61-56 championship game victory.

Speaking to newsmen, Mason conceded, "Audie hasn't been in good health the last four-to-five weeks." Pressed for more facts, he added:

"The doctor thinks he played right through a bout of mononucleosis. His play was superb, but the first 20 games he was 30-40 per cent better than he played down here."

Matthews has had an improper blood count.

Proviso East's championship win followed Peoria Central's 80-55 third place victory over Breese Mater Dei. Peoria worked four players into double scoring figures including Al Hightower, the game's top pointmaker with 16.

In the finale, Bloom's Matthews scored 19 points to lead the Trojans and ranked only behind Proviso East's Joe Ponsetto, who had 20 points, for game scoring honors. But he tallied just one basket and two free throws after halftime.

Matthews had no points during the last quarter when Proviso outscored Bloom 21-13.

But more important than Matthews' problems was Bloom's terrible overall field goal shooting, 22-74 for 29.7 per cent, and Mason's mistaken idea that the Pirates couldn't score from outside.

"We didn't realize they were that good," Mason said after Pirate guards Jerry Montgomery (eight-of-12) and Doron "Buck" Dobbins (four-of-eight) ripped his defense with 12-0f-20 shooting.

"They were taking shots with five and seven point leads and sinking them from the corners. I didn't think they would be taking them."

Montgomery scored eight points (16 total) and Dobbins five (11 total) during the final eight minutes. Five of their six combined baskets were jump shots of more than 15 feet.

The only exception occurred when Dobbins passed to Montgomery for a fast break layup at 1:35 that gave Proviso a 58-50 lead.

It was almost a repeat of the first quarter when Bloom went to a zone defense immediately. Montgomery hit four long baskets and Dobbins one as Proviso grabbed a 19-16 lead. Bloom missed six first quarter layups.

Mason zoned, with Matthews guarding the middle, because his report said that Proviso couldn't shoot. But also, because his team was tired and that showed at the end.

"We had an awful, tough, physical game this afternoon and they kind of coasted," said Mason. Bloom edged Peoria, 67-66 before Proviso smashed Breese, 64-42.

Bloom couldn't mount a serious threat after Montgomery gave Proviso its 58-50 lead, so the Pirates have their second title within five years. Behind Jim Brewer, who later played in Minnesota, they won in 1969.

But that was under coach Tom Millikin, current Proviso principal, so it was a new thrill for Glenn Whittenberg, who took over in 1970 and has compiled a 103-27 record at the Maywood school. It was Proviso's fourth state tournament and Bloom's sixth.

The Pirates' state title season, which ended at 29-4, began with only two players — Dobbins and 6-5 senior Ponsetto — who'd seen much action for last year's 22-5 team that was eliminated at Supersectionals by Elgin.

Admitting, "I'm not accustomed to losing," Whittenberg had doubts about his 1973-74 team. They opened with a 48-37 loss to Willowbrook. Proviso had a two-point first quarter and just 15 by halftime.

Whittenberg wasn't a confirmed believer until Proviso rallied from 13 points back to nip LaGrange in the finale of the Hinsdale Sectional. They did it without Ponsetto and 6-3 Michael Stockdale, their other notable big man, who fouled out and missed the last three minutes.

"I got on the bandwagon that night," Whittenberg said.

The Pirates avenged last year's loss and this year's regular season defeat to Elgin in the Supers, then were fortunate to slide into a much less difficult lower bracket at state finals.

On Friday, Proviso had an easy time of Morgan Park of the Chicago Public League, winning 75-55. Breese Mater Dei was no competition in Saturday afternoon's second game as Proviso won by 22.

Bloom, meanwhile, tangled long and hard with Hersey before bailing out a 56-51 win in the tournament opener. And the Trojans nearly lost before stopping Peoria Central by one point in Saturday's semifinals.

It was a tired Bloom team that met Proviso East in the evening finale before a nearly full house in University of Illinois Assembly Hall. And the Trojans played tired.

"We did something I've never seen us do before," Mason said. "Somewhere between 10-to-15 shots . . . almost layups . . . were missed in the first half. I can't believe how many shots didn't fall for us. My assistant coach told me 15. One of the writers here said 10. That's 20 points."

Bloom missed its heaviest concentration of easy shots during the first quarter. Trojan sophomore Robert McCoy failed on three layups, center Emir Hardy two and Matthews one. "That was the whole difference in the ballgame," Mason said.

McCoy, usually effective around the hoop, never was against Proviso, and started taking medium range jumpers which didn't drop either. He was five-of-23 from the field and Hardy only five-of-13. Each scored 12 points.

Bloom needed a late surge to grab a 33-30 halftime lead. Proviso held a 30-25 cushion before the Trojans scored eight straight points. Reserve forward Larry Thomas got one basket. Matthews had two field goals and two free throws to close the half.

"I thought we'd blown it in the last second of the first half," Whittenberg said. "I thought the game was over."

Matthews had 15 points, but it was Al Higgins, the 5-9 senior guard, whose only experience had been freshman "B" ball, who kept Bloom alive before halftime. His quickness caused the Pirates four charging fouls which turns over the ball, plus one technical and much frustration.

Higgins had both assists and one steal to engineer Matthews' two field goals that ended the second quarter. Each club had a 10 point third period, so Bloom led 43-40 with eight minutes to play.

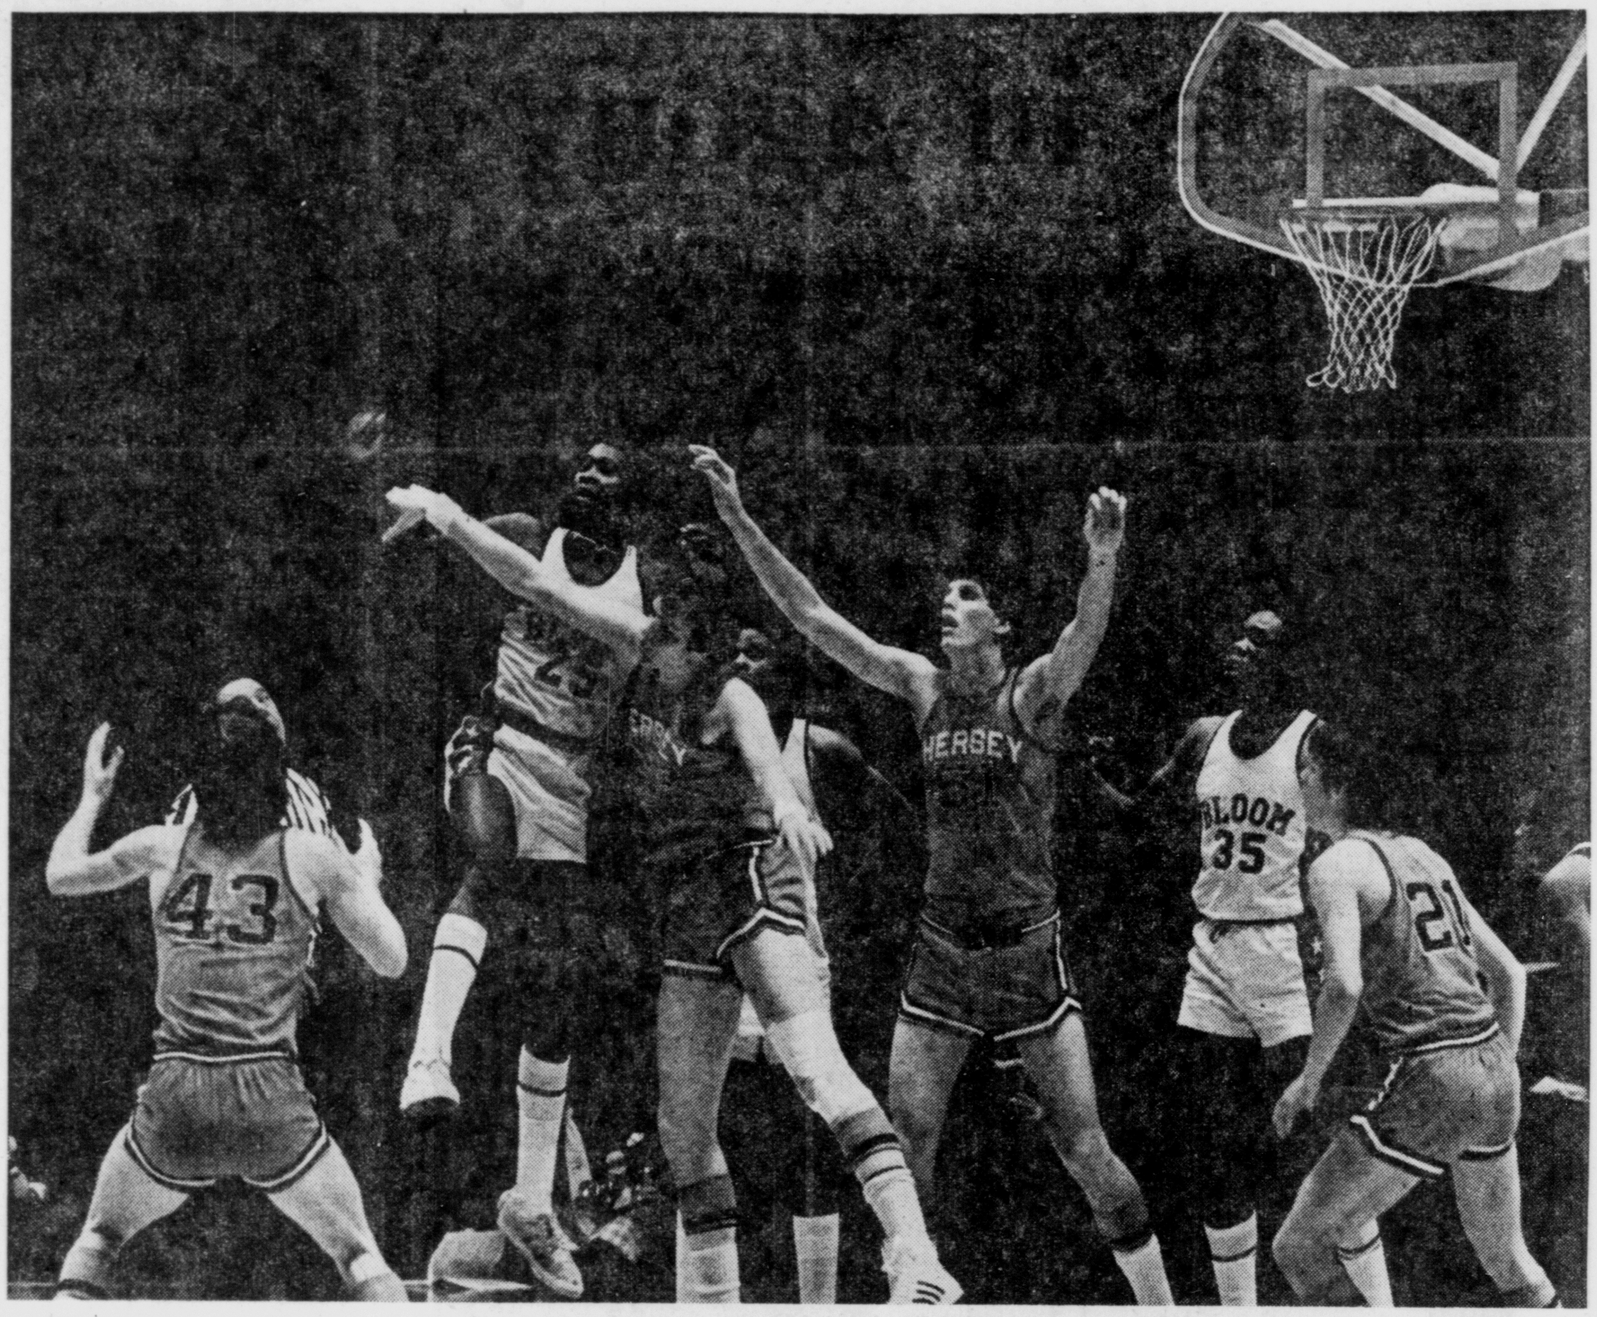

Proviso grabbed a 44-43 lead on back-to-back long jumpers by Dobbins and Montgomery. Bloom's Derrick Smith scored a tip-in for the Trojans' last lead, 45-44.

Two Montgomery field goals, a three-point play by Ponsetto and a Stockdale layup off a Ponsetto pass gave Proviso a 52-45 lead.

Whittenberg said the decisive basket was Ponsetto's breakaway lay-up at 3:12 that allowed the Pirates a 56-47 margin. It came off an inbounds play, Dobbins passing over Bloom center Hardy, and caught the Trojans completely off guard.

Ponsetto's 20 points included 14 during the second half. He had seven rebounds each half. Roderick Floyd had ten boards and Proviso owned a 47-46 rebounding advantage. Hardy gave Bloom 15 rebounds and Matthews 11.

Bloom's season ended at 29 wins and three losses. The Trojans were also beaten by Moline and Thornridge. Proviso's four defeats were against Willowbrook, New Trier East, Elgin and sister school Proviso West.

Corzine named on all-tourney

CHAMPAIGN — Bloom Forward Audie Matthews was the only unanimous choice for both All-State Tournament teams named here Saturday night by United Press International and Associated Press.

Matthews received first team mention on every ballot. UPI, which also had Hersey center Dave Corzine and Peoria Central pivotman Mike White as unanimous picks, polled the eight head coaches. Associated Press conducted its poll among the working press.

Dave Corzine

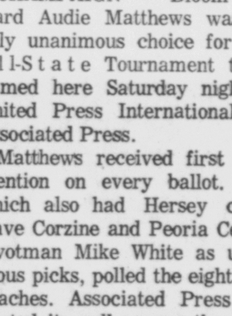

Matthews, Corzine, White, Proviso East center Joe Ponsetto and Danville center Ray Watson were first team selections for each wire service.

Three members were common to the UPI and AP second teams. They were Breese Mater Dei center Lance Reilmann, Peoria Central forward Steve Harper and Danville guard Ed Crowder.

United Press honored Bloom forward Robert McCoy and Proviso forward Michael Stockdale on its second team. Associated Press listed Peoria Central forward Brian Young and teammate guard Al Hightower.

Ponsetto was the state tournament's top scorer with 88 points in four games, including supersectionals. He nudged out Bloom's Matthews, who tallied 86 points.

Other top 10 scorers were Mater Dei's Reilmann 76 points, Peoria Central's Hightower 58, White 57 and Harper 57, Bloom's McCoy 53, Danville's Watson 50, Peoria Central's Young 50, and Bloom's Emir Hardy 46.

1st half ecstasy ends in agony

Confetti and cheers of glee for Hersey's stunning start downstate . . .

. . . Big Dave Corzine soars to help widen the bulge . . .

The state tournament — it was ever so sweet while it lasted.

Going where no other Herald area team had ever ventured before, the Huskies of John Hersey High School did more than just "show-up" at the Champaign-hosted schoolboy basketball extravaganza. They came to play!

Racing out to a fine lead in the first half, the Huskies thrilled the thousands who had followed them downstate as well as the unlucky ones who had to stay at home and watch the happenings from their living rooms. What a first 16 minutes this valiant team played. It was super, super, super.

During that intermission, everyone who backed the boys of head coach Roger Steingraber had to have that certain feeling.

The Cinderella Huskies were going on to the finals. This team, always tabbed the underdog, was going to be the top dog.

Then came the second half. It was crushing . . . dream-shattering.

The Huskies came up short, but they stood tall despite defeat. They had shown the way for future area teams.

Indeed, they were No. 1 because of that.

Tax hikes?

National organization seeks to protect rights of cyclists

Northwest suburban officials have warned of tax increases if a new federal minimum-wage bill passes with a provision requiring overtime pay for firemen who work more than 40 hours a week.

The bill was stalled last week in a Senate-House conference committee with only the controversial overtime provision for public safety employes still to be resolved.

The debate pits municipal officials from throughout the nation against organized labor, which has pushed the Senate version of the bill including the time-and-a-half provision for police and firemen who work overtime.

ESTIMATES OF the cost to local municipalities range from "considerable" to "astronomical" to "disastrous." The overtime requirement "would strain the budgets of all municipalities," said Mount Prospect Mayor Robert Teichert.

Most local firemen work about a 56-hour week — on duty for 24 hours and off for 48. Under that system, the provision would require 16 hours of weekly overtime per man, although firemen usually sleep for eight of their 24 duty hours.

But if the Senate version is passed, many local officials predict, fire departments will be forced to abandon the 24-48 system and set up regular 40-hour-a-week shifts. This would require hiring at least one-third more firemen, some officials estimated.

Gregory Ford, personnel director for Arlington Heights, said the provision would cost the village $2.3 million in the first five years. His estimate is $179,000 for the first year and up to $853,000 for the fifth year.

The extra money could come from federal revenue sharing or increased taxes, depending on the decision of the village board, Ford said. "Obviously, if the Senate bill becomes law, the money has to come from somewhere. But who knows where?," he said.

MAYOR HERBERT Behrel of Des Plaines predicted sharply higher local taxes if the provision passes, although one estimate put the extra cost to the city at only about $100,000 over the next five years.

James Watson, city manager of Rolling Meadows, said the measure "could be disastrous." He said the added cost would be "very bad" and predicted a need to hire a substantial number of new firemen to reduce the work week to 40 hours.

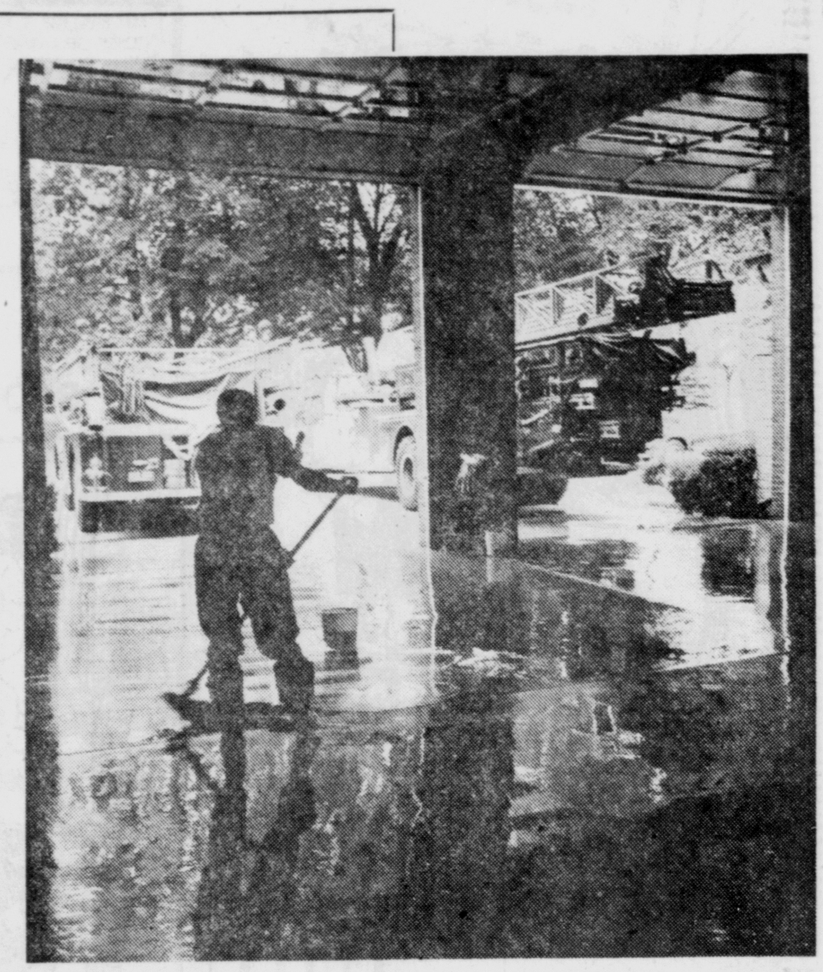

Nanci Vanderweel, trustee who heads the Elk Grove Village Board's personnel committee, called the overtime provision "horrendous" and said it would cripple the village financially. She estimated Elk Grove Village would have to hire 24 more firemen to put a 40-hour week into effect.

Since most police departments already pay overtime for more than 40 hours of work, the provision would not affect them. In some cases, police departments would be required to pay overtime rather than straight time to officers who spend extra hours each week to testify in court.

SUPPORTERS OF the bill say municipal officials have exaggerated the costs.

"They are already paying the men straight time for the whole 56 hours and if the overtime provision is passed it would only mean an additional 50 per cent for the time they work over 40 hours a week," said Michael Lass, field representative for the International Assn. of Firefighters AFL-CIO.

Lass said municipal employes should be given the same protection as workers in the private sector of the economy. "They want to have the fire protection but they do not want to pay for it and it is time for that to change," said Lass.

LOCAL OFFICIALS predict municipal wage costs will skyrocket if the U. S. Senate version of a new federal minimum wage bill is adopted. It requires overtime pay for public safety employes who work more than 40 hours a week.

Area homeowner may fight new tax assessment system

A Northwest suburban homeowner may file a court challenge to Cook County's new property tax assessment system.

Conrad B. Hill, 127 Aberdeen, Hoffman Estates, faces a possible 30 per cent tax increase because his house was entirely reassessed under new guidelines after he added a bedroom and garage in 1972.

Thousands of homeowners face similar assessment increases ranging from 20 to 40 per cent, according to Cook County Assessor P. J. Cullerton's office.

The reason is a new assessment manual used by Cullerton's field men. The manual results in higher valuations, part of an effort to change to a "fair market value" system of assessing.

Alerted by the building permits required for major home improvements, field men visit homes such as Hill's. While adding the improvements to the tax rolls, they also entirely revaluate the house under the higher "fair market" guidelines.

HOMES WITHOUT improvements escape revaluation and remain on the rolls under the old, lower guidelines.

"I can't understand how this can be legal. They're using one system for my house and another system for my neighbors," Hill said.

"I'm hoping I can enlist the aid of a lawyer. Maybe I can find 20 to 30 people who would split the cost of filing a suit," he said.

In a letter to The Herald, Hill said that "If this system is allowed to continue, it will cause remodeling of existing homes to cease. My neighbors are already cancelling plans for additional construction."

Hill's house, at Audubon and Aberdeen in Hoffman Estates, is an identical model to three neighboring corner homes, he said. The four houses were assessed at the same figure in 1972 and paid $915 in real estate taxes.

WHEN HILL completed a $4,500 conversion of a garage into a bedroom and added a new two-car garage, his assessed valuation increased from $4,364 to $6,418. The neighboring homes remained the same.

"I don't think I can sell my house, even if I wanted to. Would you pay $400 more in tax for a garage and bedroom?" Hill said.

"I am now at market value," Hill said. "But I'm paying an unfair tax share."

Several Northwest suburban homeowners, who face similar assessment increases, lost first-round appeals to the assessor's office this month. Assessment petitions are returned and "denied" because homeowners cannot disprove estimate of home value.

OFFICIALS FROM the assessor's office have said that complete switchover to the new system in one year is impossible because the county has millions of buildings. The officials have not estimated when all properties will be assessed under the new system.

When Hill questioned officials at the assessor's office he "was told that I can file for a hearing. I must obtain an independent appraisal. I will lose because it is not overstated by market value. I cannot use my neighbor's value as a case."

Hill said that his neighbors are not "upset" by the planned protest. "They understand that if this system was used at one time on all houses, assessments would increase but taxes probably wouldn't."

A similar tax switch was "put in at one time" in Wisconsin, Hill said. "That's what they need to do here."

Hill said he has requested aid from the American Civil Liberties Union.

Boy Scout camp record expected

A record number of area Boy Scouts and Explorers will attend two summer camps, according to the Northwest Suburban Council of the Boy Scouts of America.

Council camping committee chairman Roy Ingles of Des Plaines, said 53 Scout troops have already signed up to attend Camp Napowan and 42 troops are signed up to attend Namekagon Scout Reservation. This represents about 2,600 boys.

Camp Napowan is located near Wild Rose, Wisc., and has 560 acres of land fronting two lakes. The 1,200 acre Namekagon Reservation is located north of Spooner, Wisc. Both camps will operate for seven weeks.

John Jaderborg of Des Plaines is summer camp director at Namekagon; Roger Kapp of Schaumburg will be staff coordinator there; Fred Early of Wheeling will be staff coordinator of Napowan; and Erik Torrison of Palatine will be bus transportation coordinator for both camps.

MD camp volunteers

More than 50 male volunteer attendants are being sought to help care for muscular dystrophy patients who attend free summer camp this June.

According to the Muscular Dystrophy Associations of America, the male attendants are needed to help patients with their ordinary daily routine and during swimming, boating, fishing and other activities.

Attendants must be at least 15 years old. Room and board is provided. Orientation sessions are required for all volunteers. For more information about the Muscular Dystrophy Summer Camp call 427-0551.

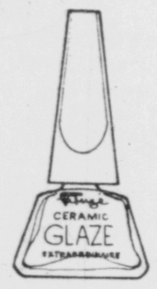

Girl Scout member drive

The Northwest Suburban Girl Scout Council Sustaining Membership Enrollment drive is under way with a goal of $33,000 as its target.

The money will be used to supplement the council's annual operating budget which is used to serve the 19,000 girls and adults in the 19 area communities of the council.

Each community is represented by a membership enrollment chairman, who is aided by troop enrollers who are contacting families for donations of up to $10.

The girl scout programs have been described as being flexible, with less emphasis on badges and more on girls' decision-making, self awareness, interpersonal relationships and exploration of current topics.

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE – Here's how to work it:

A X Y D L B A A X R
is L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

HERALD WANT ADS BRING RESULTS

Last year, all John Benson saved was $54.32.

This year, he joined the Payroll Savings Plan.

Poor John. Money just seemed to slip right through his fingers. Every time he planned to stash something away, there wasn't anything left.

Then John decided to join the Payroll Savings Plan where he works. Now, an amount he specifies is automatically set aside from his check before he gets it. And invested in U.S. Savings Bonds.

Because John has become such a systematic saver, he's almost forgotten about it. When he gets around to remembering, he's going to have quite a nest egg laid away.

And now there's a bonus interest rate on all U.S. Savings Bonds—for E Bonds, 5½% when held to maturity of 5 years, 10 months (4% the first year). That extra ½%, payable as a bonus at maturity, applies to all Bonds issued since June 1, 1970 . . . with a comparable improvement for all older Bonds.

If you keep forgetting to save something out of your check, join the Payroll Savings Plan and let somebody else do the remembering for you.

Bonds are safe. If lost, stolen, or destroyed, we replace them. When needed, they can be cashed at your bank. Tax may be deferred until redemption. And always remember, Bonds are a good way to save.

Take stock in America.

Now Bonds pay a bonus at maturity.

THE FIRST ITEM Al Wendt ever sewed was a tailored shirt. "They tell me that is the hardest thing to start out on," said the bricklayer who likes to sew in his spare time. The first "Snoopy" stuffed animal he made for his granddaughter was such a success, he started turning out more. Patchwork "Snoopy" is Al's prize creation.

Suburban Living

ESPECIALLY FOR THE FAMILY

All because he's a Libra

Al Wendt shines at the sewing machine

by GENIE CAMPBELL

Al Wendt is a bricklayer. He built the Arlington Heights home in which he and his family reside, including fireplaces on two levels.

But in his spare time, when work is slow because of bad weather or the evening's TV listings have nothing of interst to offer, Al goes down to the basement, picks up his shears and material, threads the needle on his machine and sews.

"I can tell him Thursday I'd like a new outfit for Sunday and he'll have it ready," Carole praises her spouse.

Why not? There are no hard feelings. She's never had to do a stitch of mending in her entire married life. Al does it all.

THE COMBINATION bricklayer-tailor puts new linings in coats, attaches cuffs to frayed sleeves, French-seams shirts and once made three caftans, one each for his wife, mother and daughter-in-law by fitting individual measurements to one basic design.

"What other people throw away, Al takes and repairs," said Carole.

"If it looks impossible, I'll tackle it," added her husband, who grimaces at the quality of ready-to wear. Almost everything purchased today has to be made over or reinforced he maintains.

Wendt also made the canopy for his camper truck and fashioned his own tool bag.

"They wanted $16 for it in the store," he declared.

While new acquaintances are at first surprised by Al's great sewing interest and ability, neighbors just take it for granted. Carole's friends often drop by to have Al correct their own seamstress snarls and some have even pleaded with him to sew for them. At this he draws the line.

BRICKLAYING and sewing are compatible even though one is usually rated as a "he man" profession and the other popularly falls under "homemaking." Both require steady, skilled hands.

Al likes to blame the stars. "I'm a Libra," he laughs. "I guess we're noted for being artistic and creative."

Never having had a sewing lesson in his life, Al feels anyone can teach himself or herself to sew.

"Patience is what you need to do anything. Stick with it, make it work and never give up," he affirms.

He scoffs at his own talent. "I just enjoy messing around. I've been doing it all my life."

AL'S BASEMENT is a virtual hobby center. Along one side are over a dozen fish tanks which he carefully tends, hatching and cross-breeding tropical fish for pet stores. Some newly hatched specimens require a magnifying glass to see.

Aging at the foot of the stairs are five gallon bottles of homemade wine, both wild plum and elderberry. The ping pong table in the middle of the room is never used. It's filled with all his current sewing projects.

Al used to watch his mother sew and even learned to embroider and crochet as a kid.

He buys a basic pattern and makes his own adjustments and what he feels are improvements.

If a pattern calls for one yard of material, Al can usually squeeze by with just a half by instituting a different folding scheme.

"When I throw scraps into the waste basket there is nothing left," he laughed.

He lays out a store pattern on heavy brown paper and cuts both together. The latter he saves to reuse in the future.

Although Al used to sew patches on uniforms for his buddies while in service, he didn't become an active "seamster" until he and his wife became interested in square dancing.

The wide-gored fancy skirts and tailored shirts tempted the Wendts, but they weren't about to pay the retail asking prices.

AL WOULD BUY material, usually on sale, and make them himself. He decorated his wife's colorful skirts with lace inserts and plenty of rickrack. For each new outfit he made for Carole, he whipped up a matching western style shirt for himself.

Even after the Wendts quit dancing, Al continued to sew for his wife. Now, his two grandchildren are added incentive.

People who saw the first "Snoopy" stuffed animal he made for one of his granddaughters, convinced him to do more. He has completed over a dozen altogether using old buttons for eyes and other scraps for tails and ears . He recently completed his masterpiece, a patchwork "Snoopy" fashioned entirely of leftover scraps from previous sewing projects.

Several stores have offered to stock his dogs, and right now Wendt is working on a cat pattern to match.

"IT'S A CHALLENGE, fun to see something like that develop as you begin sewing it up," he said.

The basic pattern calls for a yard and a half though Al says he cheats. He folds the material his own way and makes each one from only three-quarters of a yard.

Upstairs by his easy chair sits another project, a hooked rug, and he is also in the process of upholstering a couch.

"But I never learned to tat or knit," he said.

AL WENDT SEWS TO relax and he's not alone in the male world. Occasionally he runs into another man looking for a good buy at a fabric shop. "Some airline pilots find sewing relaxing after flying," he said. Al's most cherished possession is an antique brass dressmaking drafting set found at a local auction.

His hairdresser will know

Fashion
by Karen

Once upon a time, in fact until most recently, a man who asked a beautician to cut his hair was breaking the law. Most likely he would never be prosecuted, but the hairdresser who obliged him was risking his or her license.

The Barber and Beauty Culture Act of 1925 forbade beauticians to cut men's and even women's hair. They were allowed only to style and arrange the hair.

Five years later the Illinois Supreme Court, deciding the act was indeed too strict, allowed beauticians to cut women's hair if it was necessary while arranging or styling. But never were they allowed to crop the top of a male, and barbers made sure those who tried were duly punished.

Hairdressers rebelled. They were infuriated. It was unconstitutional they maintained.

THE MATTER OF who cuts whose hair has turned into a legal battle during the last couple of years when men began wearing their hair longer and even adopted some of the same styles as their female counterparts.

Finally, after 45 years of debate, the argument hopefully has been settled. A recent ruling by Judge Raymond K. Berg of Cook County Circuit Court "permits cosmetologists legally to cut or trim hair of both men and women patrons in connection with permanent waves, shaping, styling or arranging the hair."

But, males, you're going to have to ask a beautician to trim your hair, for hairdressers are still restricted from advertising a haircut.

Legally, a trim can still be performed only along with other salon services. Yet I'd like to find the judge who could define the difference between a haircut and just a good trim.

THE CAMISOLE, which was a sleeping jacket in the 1700s and an undergarment in the 1840s, is coming out from under.

Romantic and nostalgic, the corset covers of the past are being worn out in the open complementing jeans, slacks and soft skirts for spring and summer '74.

They're part of the girlish look so prevalent this season. They remind me of the undershirts I wore in grade school.

The new camisole will vie with the T-shirt and the halter top for top billing on the fashion circuit. Its square neckline and wide straps are highlighted by filmy laces, satin ribbons and eyelet.

Fabrics range from cotton blends, thin knits and polyester blends to satins and the colors are as soft as the fabrics — dusty orchid, peach, tangerine and, of course, the popular neutrals.

Smokers step to the rear

As a result of a recent ruling by the Interstate Commerce Commission, interstate bus riders who smoke now have to sit in the back of the bus. A rule went into effect March 22 limiting smoking to the rear 20 per cent of buses.

I thought this new policy particularly symbolic because it reinforces my belief that smokers have become the newest discriminated-against minority in the nation.

Before I permanently alienate non-smokers, let me point out that I do not smoke. I never managed to acquire the habit, though I tried in the days when it was considered a harmless but effective substitute for sophistication. I would also like to point out that I was delighted when my husband stopped smoking. There is no doubt in my mind that smoking is a health hazard — a conclusion reached by my observation of friends who have quit.

HOWEVER, I think the pressure put on smokers by non-smokers has clearly gotten out of hand. It used to be motivated by a concern for the health of a friend or relative. Now it seems to be motivated by a concern to be socially superior to the smoker.

I began to be aware of this at a Christmastime cocktail party when I discovered most of the people I knew were huddled out on the patio in 20-degree weather — smoking. I then learned that the hostess wouldn't permit smoking in her house. I was appalled.

The next time I encountered the same phenomenon, I wondered if there were a separate room for nail biters and another reserved for those with the annoying habit of saying "you know" at every comma. Maybe these people don't drop ashes or knock cigarettes off ash trays, but non-smokers have been known to spill a drink or break a dish on occasion.

I CAN'T OBJECT to the new ICC ruling or to the growing trend to restrict smoking in doctors' office waiting rooms, on planes and in other enclosed public places. But I think the new snobism is unfair to those who picked up the smoking habit because they were convinced by someone else that it was a smart and harmless thing to do. I feel it is an insult to friends to set a limit on the kind and number of qualities one will tolerate from them. If a person's smoking annoyed me so much that I would insist he indulge in it outside, I can't imagine my inviting him to my home in the first place.

In the short range of this new anti-social attitude toward smokers, there may be homes with cleaner windows, brighter sheers and unmarred table tops. But it is possible that we may be recreating the climate of earlier days when smokers were challenged to outwit non-smokers — when there was the glamor of the forbidden to sneak one in the basement, the greenhouse or the gazebo.

If this happens, we will know we've come a long way.

Record-keeping tip hits home too late this year

The homeline
by Dorothy Ritz

Dear Dorothy: Your column about being audited by the IRS and how your husband's good record-keeping had proved invaluable came too late to help me this year, but at least you have started me off on the right course for my 1974 life. I'm divorced and went into a small private home decorating business last year. In the process I drove a good many miles and bought more than a few business luncheons for prospective clients and, in my inexperience, neglected to make adequate notes of these things. Even though I am estimating these professional expenses, I know the true cost was far higher. What you convinced me to do was to invest in a proper diary-type book, and I already have the habit of making my notes each night while everything is still fresh. Thank you.

—Helen Draves

Dear Dorothy: I'm having trouble cleaning some windows on which some screens have been up for some time. None of my cleaners takes off the spots. Since the windows without screens are sparkling clean, I imagine the trouble was caused by rain going through the tiny holes with dust and dirt and then sticking. What now?

—Mrs. Lloyd Ulrich

There's only one cleaner that will take these stains off — the one professional window washers use when all else fails. It's the cleaner containing oxalic oxalic acid. You can find it in the grocery with the cleaning and laundry supplies. Because of the oxalic acid you have to use gloves. Remember that.

Dear Dorothy: For the reader wondering how to keep nylon slips from riding up, I suggest that she wear them wrong-side out. While the softener doesn't work half the time, this method will work every time. Seems to me manufacturers would do well to reverse the fabric when they make the slips.

—Mrs. Tracy

Radiation measured

HARTFORD, Conn. — Biologists measure human radiation exposure in units called rems, experts in the nuclear electric power generating industry say.

Human beings are exposed normally to three types of radiation — alpha, beta and gamma. Alpha radiation comes from soil, rocks and minerals. Beta radiation comes from minerals, television and luminous watch dials.

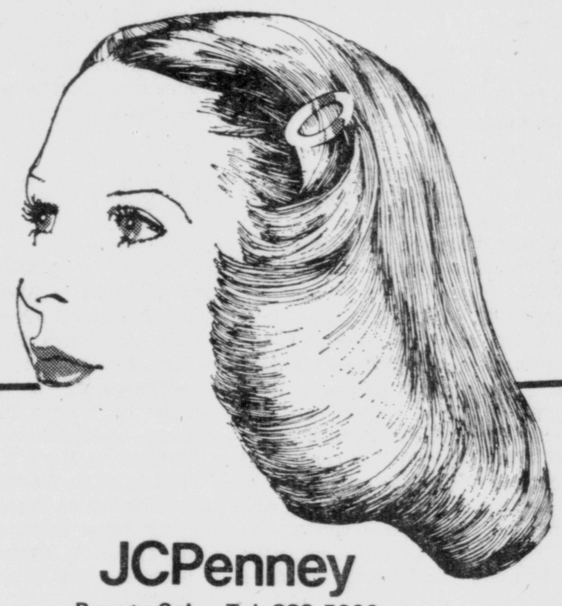

Gamma radiation, the most intense, comes from medical and dental X-rays and cosmic radiation from outer space.

The average American receives a yearly dose of 145 to 200 millirems from those sources. (UPI)

Says West Coast author:

Weddings materialistic ritual

by DUSTON HARVEY

Weddings in this country have "more to do with materialism, romanticism and ritual in American life than with marriage."

They produce ssenes of outlandish vulgarity, conspiculous consumption and dehumanizing greed, fuel a $7 billion a year industry replete with kickbacks, and show a stubborn resistance to the swirls of social change, says the author of a new book on the subject.

For instance:

A Beverly Hills tobacco czar spent $150,000 on flowers to convert his estate into a southern planation for his daughter's wedding by gluing millions of magnolia blossoms to elm trees.

—Mashed potatoes at a Los Angeles wedding dinner and the family poodle were both dyed pink to match the bridesmaids' dresses.

—A Pasadena bride's mother had a church painted yellow to match the color scheme for the ceremony, then repainted green the next day.

—A Houston bride attended 30 prenuptial parties, received $30,000 in gifts from 750 invited guests, her mother organized a card catalog system to keep track of the offerings, hired police to guard them and conducted tours for the neighbors.

—CATERESS, BAND leaders, clothiers, florists and photographers in the wedding business agreed costs could be reduced 20 per cent if kickbacks were eliminaged.

—Despite the media's attention to the so-called "New Wedding," 80 per cent of first marriages are formal, seven of eight take place in church or synagogue, 96 per cent have a reception, and 84.5 per cent of brides wear formal gowns, most chosen to make her look "like a fairy princess."

The views on American weddings came from Marcia Seligson, an unmarried "rabid feminist" from Los Angeles whose peek behind the bridal veil was published as "the Eternal Bliss Machine: America's Way of Wedding."

"I think vulgarity is funny, not important," she said in a recent interview. "Pink poddles and potatoes and dancing horses and chopped liver shaped into cruise ships are funny.

"But what does offend me is dehumanization — when it becomes really clear that the wedding has nothing to do with the relationship between two people, but has to do with things . . . with the worst excesses of the American dream come true, That really frightens me."

THE MOST surprising thing — "only to people on the coasts; no one in Middle America is surpirsed" — was that weddings haven't changed at all in the past century despite well-published nupitals in bizarre places, with self-written vows and untraditional garb.

"The fact is that we Americans are getting married almost precisely as we did a hundred years ago" — the same long, white gowns, the same vows, champagne and cake, rice and honeymoons.

"One of the things I learned about was ritual in our lives — the importance of repeated observances as one of the fortresses against internal rumblings in society," she said.

She also found most Americans spend too much on weddings because they "want to do it right" and are so insecure they let caterers, banquet managers and wedding consultants take over and run up the bills. Both the working and middle classes spend more on average of their daughters' nuptials than the "upper crust," Miss Seligson contended.

SHE DIDN'T want to prophesy, but predicted women's lib would have long-term effects on both weddings and marriage.

"Traditional monogamous marriage is not here to say," she suggested.

"I certainly would not like to see weddings done away with, but they should be more about the people involved, about real values, and not an excuse for outlandish proofs of status and displays of vulgarity," she said, admitting that some of the ceremonies she attended brought tears to her eyes.

But Miss Seligson, a reporter and former book publicist, didn't think her descriptions of wedding foibles would have the desired effect.

"What I really think it will do is push people to even greater heights of vulgarity," she predicted. "They'll use it as a guidebook — and every poodle in the United States will be dyed pink and purple."
